Up 9000 Feet. Then Off
What Does Stalin Mean?
Ciano, Able Young Man
England Kindly Advises

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

This country has the honor of establishing the first real transpacific flying service. The China Clipper, with six passengers, seven in crew, left California on Wednesday, is expected in Manila October 16, an 8200-mile trip.

The great ship ran along the surface of San Francisco Bay for 39 seconds, then lifted its 26 tons into the air, climbed easily and swiftly, up 9000 feet, nine times as high as the tallest building on earth, then flattened out, and roared away toward Asia at 140 miles an hour. What that ship does now in ten days others will do later in one day. Write that on your tablets, and Asia will come this way, at the same speed.

A delicate situation in Europe: Stalin says that if Italy and Germany continue sending airplanes, ammunition, etc., to the Spanish insurgents, he, Stalin, will help Madrid. From Stalin, this means more than a mere ending of the neutrality agreement by which European powers agreed to let Spain fight it out with no outside help.

Stalin, whatever his other weaknesses, does not act hastily, possessing the cunning that has distinguished other Russian rulers before him. When he sent his first ambassador to Japan he ordered, "Remember that the Japanese know at least as much as you know. Keep your mouth shut and listen."

Stalin kept his mouth shut and listened during the week of the Nazi celebration, when German orators from Hitler down were denouncing him.

Warning Germany and Italy that "if you don't stop helping the Spanish insurgents, I shall help the Madrid government," Stalin means that if Italy and Germany want a fight they may have it, and when he says that, it means that he thinks he is READY, not only ready for Germany and Italy on the west, but also for Japan on the east.

Stalin has the biggest standing army in the world, and perhaps the biggest air fleet in the world. His treatment of enemies in Russia, throwing out the powerful Trotsky as though he were a sick kitten, shooting down his political opponents in batches of sixteen, prove ability to act with decision. He knows that the war will be half won by the aggressor that first successfully bombs the enemy's principal city.

Rome believes that Mussolini expects his son-in-law, Ciano, to succeed him as ruler of Italy and plans, soon, to put him in his place as Prime Minister of Italy, Mussolini, naturally, remaining as Duce while he lives. Ciano is only 38, but older than Alexander was when he conquered the earth, older than Napoleon when he made himself Trip South Tires Rockefeller, Sr.

Ormond Beach, Fla., Oct. 9 (INS)—Obviously tired from his long train trip southward, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., today completed his annual pilgrimage to his winter home here.

The 97-year-old financier was carried from his special railroad car to an ambulance and immediately whisked off to his home, The Casements.

Newspaper photographers were asked not to take pictures of him upon his arrival here.

"He is tired and is not feeling very well," Ward Madison, Rockefeller's secretary, told the photographers.

However, his general health was reported to be good.

Rockefeller wore a white cap and a linen duster, the latter emblazoned with a Landon sunflower button. Several other persons in the group also wore the sunflowers.

Numerous guards and servants crowded around the multi-millionaire as he was carried from the train.

BRITISH WARN WAR NEAR IF PACT FAILS

By KINGSBURY SMITH

International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, Oct. 9—A general European upheaval threatens unless the non-intervention pact in Spain is respected to the letter, Charles Corbin, ambassador to France, warned today when members of the neutrality committee met to consider Soviet Russia's charges that Germany, Italy and Portugal have violated the pact.

In a tense but calm atmosphere, the 27 nations represented on the committee considered the situation for five hours, attempting to subject the crisis precipitated by Moscow's alegations to diplomatic pacification.

Corbin spoke after Samuel Kagan, Soviet charge d'affaires, had reviewed in detail Russia's charges that German, Italian and Portuguese arms and munitions are flowing to the rebels in Spain in direct contravention of neutrality pledges and embargo commitments.

Corbin stressed the gravity of the situation precipitated by Russia's outspoken threat to abandon neutrality unless such alleged violations cease immediately.

He pointed out the difficulties

Mrs. Lyon Boston, the former Barbara Hudnut, Brookline society girl, today entered Trumbull Hospital, Brookline, for a long rest.

Officials at the hospital declared that no visitors would be allowed to see the prominent society matron for several days.

Mrs. Boston was under treatment at the same hospital in April and December, 1933. In December, 1931, she suffered injuries in an auto crash.

She was married October 3, 1931. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David I. Hudnut of Garrison road, Brookline, and a cousin of Natacha Rambova (Winifred Hudnut) second wife of the late Rudolph Valentino.

Al Smith Says 'U. S. Betrayed'

Philadelphia, Oct. 9—(US)—Alfred E. Smith, calling on all "loyal Democrats" to join him in opposing President Roosevelt, charged the Roosevelt New Deal with betrayal of all but two planks in Democratic party platform on which Roosevelt was elected in 1932.

Introduced as "still the Happy Warrior" before a wildly cheering throng of 15,000 who were packed inside and outside of the Metropolitan Opera House where he spoke under auspices of the Jeffersonian Democrats, the Democratic party's presidential standard bearer of the 1928 campaign warned his audience and the thousands of listeners on the radio:

"On the third day of next month, the American people will make the most important decision of the last 50 years.

"I'm going to ask you and the people who are listening to me on the radio to separate political bunk from fact in the next three weeks."

When the cheers that greeted that warning had subsided, Smith went on to declare that the only two planks of the Democratic plat-

MAN ROUTS 4 WITH PISTOL, SAVES $5000

Four armed bandits, who raided the Meisel Press Manufacturing Company's plant at 944 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, this afternoon, more than met their match in the president of the company, Charles Meisel.

Instead of getting a payroll estimated as more than $5000, which had been in the place only ten minutes, the robber quartet met a blaze of gunfire from Meisel.

Singlehanded he battled with the four, sending three bullets through the body of one, tentatively identified as Joseph Freedman, 35, of New York. Doctors gave Freedman little hope to live. Two bullets went through his lungs.

Meisel himself was cut on the face and head by glass which flew from a partition against which he stood as the bandit bullets splintered it. Not one bullet hit him,

Dirigible Circles Boston

Thousands of Bostonians and thousands of other persons in surrounding cities and towns here were treated to a real view of the gigantic German dirigible Hindenburg today.

Notified in advance of the cruise, spectators jammed windows, covered roof tops and craned necks upwards from streets to watch the majestic silvered ship come in from the west, circle the city and then turn her nose southward.

There were 73 passengers aboard her, including former Governor Alvan T. Fuller and a group of 50 Standard Oil Company executives.

BEHIND SCHEDULE

The Hindenburg arrived a few minutes after noon, nearly an hour behind her schedule. But that delay had made no difference to the crowds, because they had grown larger, if anything.

Because the wind was easterly, the dirigible circled over Boston counter-clockwise fashion, sailing in first along the waterfront section, then swinging about near the Custom House to nose southward.

She flew lower than she ever had before in her trips over the city and the sun, glinting on her silvered sides as she cut through a delicate mist, made the huge ship a thing of beauty as well as of majesty.

Shortly before the dirigible glided in, an airplane, flying a banner that read "Hindenburg Coming," gave warning of her proximity.

After leaving here, the dirigible passed over Quincy, Brockton, Attleboro and Providence, R. I. Then she turned back to Lakehurst, N. J., which she had left shortly after 7 a. m.

After her return to Lakehurst this afternoon the ship was to be anchored at the Naval Air Station mooring mast preparatory to resuming her transatlantic schedule tonight.

MEN, GIRL SOUGHT IN HACK SLAYING

Sack Slaying Highlights

Leading developments today in the Weymouth sack murder mystery were:

Oficial reconstruction of sack victim's murder revealed by Assistant District Attorney George A. Arbuckle.

Fingerprints of slayer, found on bathtub, furnish best clue to identity.

Possibility of second murder, victim being one of Mrs. Asquith's suitors, strengthened by mysterious telephone call to Boston police.

Police rip apart bloodstained Weymouth bungalow, dig in cellar and yard, in search for torso and head of slain woman.

Quincy man names himself and another as visitors to Mrs. Grayce Asquith on day she was slain, but denies all knowledge of the crime.

Search started for a mysterious "Catherine," reputed friend of the victim.

In the living room of the snug East Weymouth bungalow where she played the gay hostess at many a party, Mrs. Grayce Griffin Asquith was murdered.

In the bath tub there, her still warm body was dismembered.

And in her blood, on door-jamb and tub, her killer left his fingerprints.

This disclosure, and this tentative, official version of the appalling "Merry Widow" murder, were announced by authorities today as they pressed the search for blonde Grayce Asquith's head and torso—and for her slayer.

Clear fingerprints in dried smears of blood, police predicted, would lead to swift, complete solution of the crime.

The exact manner in which Mrs. Asquith was slain, and why, were undetermined.

Still questioning a Quincy man, police launched an inter-state hunt for a Boston ex-stock salesman, friend of the widow, missing from his Back Bay apartment since she vanished, not to be traced until her legs were found in Boston harbor Monday.

Some fear was expressed that he, too, may have been slain.

At least one other man and a girl whose first name is "Catherine" were also sought for questioning.

As police started at daybreak to tear apart the bungalow on the shore of Whitman Pond for missing parts of the body and other clues, Assistant District Attorney George Arbuckle, the executive co-ordinating efforts of Weymouth, Quincy, Boston and state detectives, made known to the Boston Evening American the police reconstruction of the crime to date. He said:

"There is every indication that Mrs. Asquith was killed in the living room of her bungalow on the night of September 19.

"Why she was killed—the motive—we have not yet established and may not be able to do so until her slayer is caught, her body completely recovered.

SIGNS OF STRUGGLE

"There are signs that a violent struggle took place in the living room and that somebody, Mrs. Asquith, no doubt, was knocked into the fireplace there. There is a great deal of blood spattered on the walls there.

"We have found a lot of blood signs in and around the bathtub, and it is probably there that the victim was cut up. The tub and all the piping to the cesspool are being torn up for inspection.

"We are still baffled why the slayer, going to the extreme precaution of dismembering the body and taking at least part of it a long distance for concealment, should have left behind him a house that in every way cries 'murder.'"

VISITORS AT COTTAGE

After a morning of intensive investigation, police said they were convinced that the Quincy man being questioned, Oscar Battalini, and the missing ex-stock broker, John Albert Lyons, 39, of St. Botolph street, Back Bay, a disabled war veteran, were visitors at Mrs. Asquith's cottage on September 19.

Investigators said it was definitely established that the killing took place between dusk of September 19 and dawn of Sunday, September 20.

Battalini, a chauffeur, friend of Mrs. Asquith and her erstwhile handy man for odd jobs about the place, denied all knowledge of the crime and furnished an alibi.

He declared, the police said, that he left Lyons at the house Saturday, September 19, and had never again seen either of them.

Battalini could give the authorities no help toward ascertaining who might have arrived at the bungalow after he left.

Lyons, who is one of two men said to have been suitors of the slain woman, is missing from his Boston lodging house.

He vanished about three weeks ago, according to his landlady, leaving behind his belongings, and he did not return to pick up his veteran's check dated October 1.

In a telephone call to Boston police headquarters early today, a man who said he was Lyons asserted he was going to report for questioning, but nobody appeared, and the authorities are entertaining a theory it may have been somebody desirous of indicating the war veteran was still alive.

Police were already entertaining a theory that Lyons, too, may have been slain, although radio messages have been sent throughout the East to try to find him.

If he was killed, and the killer dared to telephone police with a "fake" message from him, it provide one more bizarre angle to the strangest crime to confront the authorities in years.

LYONS DISABLED VET

Lyons is 39 years old. He was born in Boston and attended school here, and as a boy served a printer's apprenticeship in a Cambridge filing and index concern.

During the World War he served in the Navy, contracting a disability that resulted in his later hospitalization on several occasions. He collected $50 a month compensation.

After the war he was a salesman for a Congress street brokerage house.

His last previous address was Albemarle Chambers, at St. Botolph and Albemarle streets, Back Bay.

In the search for Lyons, police tried to locate a young woman relative who owns a machine he often borrowed.

Harry Parker, former close friend of the widow, walked into Boston police headquarters and discussed the case with Deputy Superintendent Claflin. He left after saying he had not seen Mrs. Asquith for the last two years or so, and knew nothing of her recent associations.

FIND FINGERPRINTS

Ten clear fingerprints, all of one man, were obtained by Sergeant Stanley Gaw, Boston fingerprint expert, from various articles in the bungalow, including an empty whiskey bottle and three glasses which had not been washed since they held whiskey.

The prints on bottle and glasses, police believe, were left there the night of the crime. These were turned over to state police.

Investigators learned from neighbors that on the Wednesday night before the crime, a rainy, foggy night, some kind of fracas took place in the bungalow and a man was heard to shout:

"Oh, Catherine! Oh, Catherine!"

Police believe the crime may have resulted from the trouble on this night, and efforts were begun to learn the identity of those who were Mrs. Asquith's guests.

New articles found at the bungalow as the search resumed included a heavy monkey wrench and a cut-up onion bag. Twine found in the house does not match the twine used to tie up the dismembered legs.

Three holes, apparently made by small calibre bullets, in a pane of a French window in the bathroom, may be in some way connected with the case.

BULLET HOLES IN WINDOW

The holes appear to have been made by slugs passing through the pane from outside to inside, but no bullets were found.

The window is such a height above the ground that to have fired horizontally into the room, a person would have been required to stand on a ladder outside.

State Detective Captain John F. Stokes and Captain John F. McCarthy of the Boston homicide squad collaborated in a statement to the effect that Battalini was being further questioned because he had not visited Mrs. Asquith's bungalow since September 19, whereas he was previously a frequent caller.

Battalini told police, they said, that he did odd jobs around the place for the widow and that she paid him with $5 checks. About two dozen of these cancelled checks were obtained by police from a Quincy bank.

FIND BURLAP IN CELLAR

Burlap similar to that wrapped around one of the dismembered legs was found in the cellar, entrance to which is gained by a trap door in the kitchen.

Mrs. Gladys Murray, neighbor of the slain woman, told police about a swarthy man, who drove a green sedan and smoked a corncob pipe who used to visit Mrs. Asquith nearly every afternoon.

Once, she said, Mrs. Asquith ran screaming from the bungalow and this man followed her, caught her and pushed her back into the house.

JEALOUSY MOTIVE?

Jealousy was a motive receiving considerable attention from the investigators.

Other neighbors described the bungalow as a "hot spot," scene of many gay, noisy parties.

Whitman Pond, about 30 yards along a wooded path from the bungalow, will not be dragged for the head except as a last resort. It is full of stumps that would impede grappling.

Police feel, too, that if the missing remainns are not on the premises they were disposed of in the manner the slayer used to get rid of the legs.

This belief was given some strengthening when Captain Daniel Doran, of Quincy police, and a Boston officer, found burned fragments of clothing on a Weymouth Beach. The body, police said, may have been cast into the water from Weymouth and the legs carried by currents to the spot where they were found off East Boston.

TELLS OF VICTIM'S FEARS

At her home today, tired and visibly shaken by the murder of her friend, Mrs. Isabelle Murphy declared:

"The last six months Grayce seemed to be very depressed. She very rarely spoke when she was visiting me and only then when she was spoken to.

"Evidently she was frightened but she wasn't the sort of girl who talks much about things that worry her. I guess she was frightened, at that, for she recently put a new chain lock on her bedroom door.

"But Al (John A. Lyons) seems to be the mystery man. I wonder where he is? I hear he even hasn't cashed his bonus as yet."

One squad of police investigators was assigned to run down a promising clue furnished by a Weymouth electrician, Gerald F. Dwyer, who saw what may have been a body in a burlap sack in an automobile one night last month.

The two men in the automobile, according to Dwyer, resented his peering into their sedan, as they inquired the way "by a back road" to Hough's Neck.

The waters in that vicinity will also be searched for the missing torso and head of the attractive former model.

After Battalini who was held, not as a suspect, but simply "for questoning," had been quizzed for hours, by state police and officers from Weymouth and Boston, the authorities revealed his alleged story.

Battalini, according to the police, said he drove Lyons to the cottage on Alpine road, Weymouth, during the afternoon and remained a short time, himself, but did not drink with the others.

While he was there, according to the police version of his alleged story, Mrs. Asquith asked Lyons:

"Did you bring the ham for the Sunday dinner?"

"Yes," replied the veteran, according to the police, quoting Battalini's alleged statements.

The fact that the ham was found in the cottage, still uncooked, together with the fact that neighbors recalled having last seen Mrs. Asquith at about that time, established the date of her death.

The Quincy man allegedly said that upon leaving at 5:30 that Saturday afternoon he went to Nantasket and visited a friend.

ALIBI WITNESSES

When names were supplied police detachments were sent out from Quincy police headquarters to bring in alibi witnesses. A man and wife were brought from East Boston.

Later two girls from Boston, one a blonde and the other a brunette, both striking types, appeared and went in with the police officials. Battalini this morning was taken to a house on Beale street, Hingham, and the officers returned with him and another man.

Out of this Hingham angle grew reports that various South Shore politicians would be brought into the investigation for questioning.

DESCRIBES "TOUGH"

David McMorrow, milkman, gave police a description of a "tough looking fellow" he had seen several times at the bungalow this summer.

McMorrow said that when Mrs. Asquith wanted milk, which she did not every day, she left an empty bottle on the porch and he left a pint. On September 20, he said, there was an empty bottle and he left a pint. On September 21 he left another pint. On the following day he discovered that neither bottle of milk had been taken in and he took them away.

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing took personal command of the investigation, visiting Quincy headquarters, where Battalini was questioned, and the Weymouth bungalow.

Captain Stokes, head of the state detectives, was leading the investigation, assisted by Police Chief Edward F. Butler of Weymouth, Lieutenant John A. Hutchins of Weymouth, State Detectives Fleming, Ferrari and Crescio, Assistant District Attorney Arbuckle of Norfolk County and Captain McCarthy of the Boston department.

Medical Examiner William J. Brickley, whose hypothetical reconstruction of the victim from the recovered limbs so closely approached the actual measurements of Mrs. Asquith, surprised newspapermen at headquarters today when he said:

"While police are satisfied with the identification I could not say I have part of the corpus delicti of Mrs. Asquith until I get Mrs. Asquith's footprints. The truth always holds but the apparent truth doesn't always hold."

He did not, however, express any doubt that Mrs. Asquith was the victim, and Frank Stratton, police chemist, began a microscopic inspection of the bungalow floor in search for footprints. Stratton made blood tests of the recovered legs and will compare these with blood in the cottage.

VICTIM'S RING PAWNED

Sergeant Detective Coleman Joyce learned that on June 10, Mrs. Asquith's wedding ring, set with 26 square cut diamonds, had been pawned for $30 at a loan house in Cornhill.

At the same place is a solitaire diamond ring put up as collateral for $60 cash on March 28, 1935. Mrs. Asquith had made two interest payments on this one in May, one in October.

FRIEND'S FEAR GIVES CLUES TO SLAYING

She put up stocks as collateral for another loan on October 6, 1931, and did not redeem these stocks until February of this year.

Police were informed she received a monthly annuity from her husband's insurance policy.

Orders were issued to raze the Weymouth bungalow entirely, if necessary, in the search for the head and torso of the victim.

In the absence of a corpus delicti, and the search in house and cellar and neighboring pond, the case greatly resembles the Edith DuBois murder mystery of several years ago.

The plumbing in the house was ripped apart, the drain pipes probed, the cesspool in the yard explored and the ground under the house and beneath a nearby garage dug up.

Even in the dark, digging began, but it was without result, although the finding of lime sprinkled on the ground a short distance from the gruesome bungalow spurred on the officers to renewed efforts.

Meanwhile government agents of the narcotic division were closely following developments as a result of reports of a drug angle in the mystery.

A threatening letter was found among many other letters in the bungalow, and it was rumored that this threat against Mrs. Asquith

JOHN ALBERT LYONS

TRAGEDY IN GIRLHOOD MARKED SACK VICTIM

Tragedy came early into her life, it was revealed today in tracing back through the years since Mrs. Grayce Griffin Asquith, harbor butcher slaying victim, was born in a house in New Park street, Lynn, April 12, 1895.

When she was only 11 years old, her father, James A. Griffin, native of Westminster, a Lynn shoeworker and sometimes a city employe, committed suicide by chloroform, according to Lynn city records.

Her mother was Lena Franklin Griffin, a native of Ashburnham, who dropped dead from heart disease January 28, 1932, while walking in East Lenox street, South End.

MARRIED IN 1924

A year after the birth of Grayce (her name is carried on the birth records as Grace May Griffin) the family moved from the New Park street house to one in Franklin street, Lynn.

They remained in Franklin street after the father's suicide and until about 1908, when they moved away from Lynn.

The next official record of the harbor butcher slaying victim is in 1924, when on October 11 she was married to Godfrey Asquith, 30, a Weston farmer.

On his marriage license application, Asquith stated that he was a widower, a native of Allentown, Pa., and that his parents were Bernard Asquith and Bertha Freeman Asquith.

NAMED "GRACE" THEN

The girl spelled her name as Grace Griffin, gave her age as 25, her place of residence as Weston and her occupation as "at home."

The couple were married 12 years ago next Sunday by Town Clerk Brenton H. Dickson, Jr., of Weston, a justice of the peace.

This marriage, however, lasted only two years, ending in divorce. A short time later, Asquith died, but he left money to his divorced wife.

There is no record at the State House of any subsequent marriage of the murder victim, but at City Hall it is recorded that on August 19, 1930, a man giving his name as Harry Parker, 30, of Lagrange street, West Roxbury, filed intentions to marry her.

In his application, the man stated he was single and was an actor, the son of Thomas H. Parker, born in Lawrence, and Julia H. Pearls Parker, a native of Manchester, N. H.

In filling out the other side of the application, the man made several errors. He gave the name of his intended bride as Grayce Asquith, 31, a widow, born in Lynn and occupation sales manager.

Her address was given at 827 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, but the West Roxbury man stated that her father was "James Franklin," born in Worcester, and her mother "Lena F. Griffin," born in New York City. Her mother's maiden name was Franklin.

Although the marriage license, obtained five days following filing application, was good until February, 1931, no return was ever made to City Hall to show a marriage.

Either the couple abandoned their marital plans, in the opinion of officials, or the person officiating at the marriage neglected to make a return.

Widow Led Merry Life

By many of her friends and neighbors she was called "The Merry Widow" in those days when no thought of tragic death at the hands of a fiendish slayer came to mar her happiness.

Slowly, page by page, investigators were reading back today through the past life of Mrs. Grayce May Asquith, harbor butcher slaying victim—and the pages told them that she laughed with life.

Frequent parties were held at her home. Men wooed her, swain succeeding swain.

Only five weeks ago a furious wife trailed her husband to the bungalow of Mrs. Asquith on Whitman Pond, in East Weymouth.

A heated argument between the angry wife, Mrs. Asquith and others on a party ensued, the neighborg revealed.

In Allston and Back Bay apartments where she once lived she had various men callers, the investigators learned, an dthe nights were gay and carefree.

POLICE HUNT MEN, GIRL IN SACK SLAYING; PROSECUTOR REBUILDS BUNGALOW CRIME

had to do with narcotics. A Chinese coin was discovered near the house.

QUIZ BACK BAY GIRL

May Liroux, of Hemenway street, Back Bay, to whom police talked in an effort to learn Mrs. Asquith's recent associations, said she had not seen the victim for a long time.

Lempi Ferrella, of East Weymouth, proprietor of an inn, volunteered the information that he had seen the widow on her lake shore grounds on the Thursday preceding the Saturday night she is believed to have been killed.

Mrs. Asquith, a native of Lynn, a former resident of Wellesley and a winter resident of Boston apartment house districts, was 41 and a widow.

She was divorced from her husband, however, before he died.

MRS. MURPHY HELPS

Balked for several days after the finding of the crudely hacked-off legs of a woman in Boston Harbor, police were led to the astounding Weymouth disclosures by an Allston woman friend of Mrs. Asquith.

Police Lieut. Hutchins of Weymouth had learned that Mrs. Asquith was missing, and he started an investigation which led to the questioning of Mrs. Isabelle Murphy of 1156 Commonwealth avenue, Allston.

"I have been fearing something happened to Grayce," said Mrs. Murphy. "I'm afraid those legs found in the water were hers."

After talking with Dr. William Brickley, Boston medical examiner, Deputy Superintendent James R. Claflin and Captain McCarthy, she went with them and Chief Butler of Weymouth to the bungalow at Whitman Pond.

Signs of murder were apparent the moment the officers opened the door.

Floors, rugs, walls and furniture were bloodstained. There was so much blood that the officers quickly expressed the belief that a body had been dissected in the house.

A Boston newspaper, complete except for one section, was found in the house, and the section that was missing was the same as that found wrapped around one of the legs discovered in the harbor.

BELIEVE CLEAVER USED

When Mrs. Asquith's shoes were examined, a small depression was found in the heel of one of them, corresponding exactly with a callous on the right foot that was found in the harbor water.

Police records cannot provide a stranger method of identification.

Speculation on the manner in which Mrs. Asquith was slain began immediately the bungalow was entered, but today it still remained a baffling mystery.

Discovery of a meat cleaver, which was not bloodstained, but which may have been cleaned, led police to believe that it very possibly was the weapon used.

A carpenter's saw was also found. It, too, was clean of stains—too clean, some of the officers declared.

Fingerprints were taken on tables, chairs and elsewhere in the little summer cottage.

Everything showing bloodstains was carefully preserved for chemical tests.

In attempting to fix a motive for the crime, police made little progress but were confident developments would shortly bring the motive to light.

Mrs. Asquith, who was described as very attractive, had two ardent suitors, it was said. In addition there were numerous men who called at the cottage, some of them evidently men of wealth.

Weymouth police said that for some time suspicion had pointed to a possibility of a link between visitors to the cottage and the illicit narcotics trade, but they did not involve the slain woman in their statements.

Federal agents who came into New England to try to solve the mystery of narcotics running in this section of the country were also said to have directed considerable attention to the South Shore.

Battalini, questioning of whom continued at intervals, was the victime of a slashing in June of last year.

His alleged assailant was later acquitted.

Details of the gruesome discoveries at the summer cottage of Mrs. Asquith shocked a large crowd that gathered on the scene and remained for hours.

DINNER FOR THREE

On entering the Weymouth cottage, police found bloodstains on the rugs, the furniture and walls, and even on a mantelpiece and mirror.

In the cellar, and outside the house, blood stained rags and burlap were found.

In Mrs. Asquith's bedroom were two empty trunks. Her handbag was on the floor. Her clothing had been thrown about the room. The bed linen was in disarray and the blankets were missing. The sheets were covered with blood.

A laundrybag containing bloodstained handkerchiefs was found under the kitchen table.

SAW CLEANED

The saw, bearing no bloodstains, was found in the pantry. Police said it appeared to have been thoroughly cleaned only a short time ago.

Later the officers found the cleaver in the cellar as well as a section of a Boston Sunday newspaper, of July 12—the same date as the paper in which one of the legs of the victim was wrapped.

A thorough search of the house and surroundings was made for an empty poison vial, without success.

The investigating officers had hardly finished their examination of the premises when Gerald F. Dwyer of North Weymouth appeared on the scene and electrified them with his story.

Deputy Superintendent Claflin of the Boston police, who remained on the scene for any assistance he might be able to render, after the locale of the crime had been shifted to Weymouth, said:

STATE POLICE ON JOB

"There's no doubt Mrs. Asquith met her death here and we are satisfied that the gruesome discoveries made in Boston harbor were parts of her body.

"How she met her death remains undetermined. The case is now in the hands of the state police, with Captain Stokes in command, and of the Weymouth police under Chief Butler. The state chemist has taken the various articles, including the saw and cleaver, for examination and tests.

"Considerable blood was found in the cottage—bloodstained burlap and clothing and bedding.

"We will assist the state police in searching for a Boston man, wanted for questioning."

Facts about Mrs. Asquith's past life were requested from various cities and towns by teletype and radio.

It was learned that she was born in Lynn in 1895. Her maiden name was Griffin and she had been a model.

Her husband was the late Godfrey Asquith, who owned the Pioneer Farm in Wellesley. The couple were divorced about ten years ago and Asquith died a few years later. Police were informed that he left his ex-wife some money but how much was not determined.

After her divorce, Mrs. Asquith lived in several Boston apartments.

Her mother lived with her until her death about four years ago.

Mrs. Asquith purchased the Weymouth cottage three summers ago and police said that, according to neighbors, she had numerous visitors and the bungalow was often a scene of gaiety lasting into the early hours.

Two men were considered by the neighbors to be ardent admirers of the widow as their visits were frequent. The possibility of a love triangle arises from this report.

One woman neighbor said that about six weeks ago her small daughter came running home crying that Mrs. Asquith had dashed out of the bungalow screaming.

The neighbor was aware that two men were visiting at the cottage at the time, and she considered calling the police but changed her mind.

One of the men was employed in Quincy square, she said. A check-up on his recent whereabouts brought the disclosure that he has not been seen about Quincy for some time, but just how long the police were unable to ascertain.

Mrs. Murphy told the police that all of her friend's outer clothing appeared to be in the bungalow, indicating that when the torso is found it will be clad only in undergarments.

James Leathered of Tremont street, Boston, who owns a cottage nearby, said he heard a woman's screams during the night, two weeks ago, but as the screams were not repeated, he did not investigate or notify the police.

Weymouth police reports show that officers were, however, called to the house several times to quiet the occupants, and in April, 1935, Mrs. Asquith was taken to the police station with a man who was later charged with possessing narcotics. Mrs. Asquith was not held.

A Weymouth high school boy, George Gilman, 14, said he believed he saw a light in the Asquith bungalow last Saturday night, and he remembered that two windows were open.

Arthur Hillstrom, 10, of Lambert avenue, Weymouth, found a stained rag in the yard several days ago and threw it out into the street.

The story told by young Gilman, who is a newsboy, indicated the possibility that somebody returned to the cottage, either in search of something or to try to clean up the place.

Police accounted for the bloodstains in the various rooms with a theory that the woman was dragged after she had been wounded and that, as she was moved, blood spurted on the walls and floor.

"MYSTERIOUS WOMAN"

Several residents in the vicinity referred to Mrs. Asquith as a "mysterious woman." They said that not only were parties frequently held at her home, but they had seen expensive automobiles drive up, sometimes driven by men wearing tuxedos.

About five weeks ago a woman trailed her husband to the cottage and engaged in a furious argument with Mrs. Asquith and others in the place, it was said.

The three persons in the house on the night of the crime had evidently consumed more than a quart of whiskey. A quart bottle was found empty and a pint bottle was about half full.

Shoes and slippers found in the cottage provided a strong link between the Weymouth crime and the harbor mystery. Some of the shoes were bloodstained.

Those in the cottage were size 3 for the right foot and 3½ for the left foot. Only one woman in several thousand wears such a small shoe, and this accounts for Mrs. Asquith's frequent employment as a shoe model.

The sizes tally with measures of the feet found in Boston Harbor.

Mrs. Asquith was five feet one and a half inches tall and weighed about 110 pounds. Those who knew her remarked about the whiteness of her skin. This, together with her small regular features, made her very attractive, it was said.

Experts who examined the limbs found in the harbor had also noted the whiteness of the skin.

The clothing found at various places in the harbor is not believed to be that of Mrs. Asquith.

Investigation revealed that Mrs. Asquith has a brother living in New York, and the authorities were informed that she had a son who is in Florida. This boy is 16 years old, the police said they were told. Further inquiry is being made on this point.

The boy is said to have been turned over to a sister-in-law of Mrs. Asquith at the time of her divorce.

On the Winthrop shore near Cottage park, last night, 14-year-old Herbert Drew of Bellevue avenue, Winthrop, found a woman's white sport shoe, size three or four. Nearby were a stained rubber mat and a piece of a hammock.

Mrs. Anna Ravagni of Arlington, with whom Mrs. Asquith sometimes lived, said today that she was planning to call her friend to invite her to visit her. She had not seen Mrs. Asquith since July.

At 385 Riverway, where Mrs. Asquith lived several years ago, she was remembered as an "attractive blonde."

WITNESS SAW SACK IN AUTO, POLICE TOLD

While he actually carried the barber butcher slaying victim's body in the back seat of his car, the slayer or his accomplice talked to Gerald F. Dwyer of North Weymouth, police believed following Dwyer's story.

"I was in Bicknell square, Weymouth," said Dwyer, "about 11:15 one night in September—I can't remember the date—when a sedan pulled up beside me.

"The driver blew his horn three times but I ignored the car at first. Finally he yelled, 'Hey you,' and I stopped to see what he wanted.

"He asked me how to get to Houghs Neck by the back road. I told him, but while we were talking I took a look into the car. He was right beside me and I could see into it all right.

"I saw a big bundle in the back seat. It filled the whole seat. I think it was wrapped in burlap. That's what it looked like. Made me think of a sack of potatoes, but a pretty big one. The idea came to me it might be a body.

"The man with the driver, a red-faced man, kind of fat and with shell-rim glasses, said, 'What are you, a wise guy—staring like that?'"

Dwyer said the man then drove off and that while he did not take the registration number, despite his suspicion, believes he can identify the men if he saw them again.

Lyons, Sought In Mystery, Is Navy Vet

John Albert Lyons of St. Botolph street, Back Bay, sought for questioning in the sack murder mystery, is a disabled naval veteran of the World War, attached to the naval air service.

Born in Boston August 20, 1897, the son of William A. and Catherine Lyons, the war veteran lived until a few months ago with his mother and three sisters in Allston.

Up to June 16 of this year, however, he had lived at the Albemarle Chambers in Albemarle street, Back Bay, moving from there to the St. Botolph street address a short distance away.

Lyons enlisted in the naval reserve from Boston on February 15, 1918, and was honorably discharged in Boston on February 1, 1919, with the rank of quartermaster, second class.

In 1918, while with a naval air service unit at Philadelphia, the unit was ordered overseas, the order being countermanded and Lyons being sent to Miami, Fla. From there he was transferred to the naval air station at Pensacola, Fla.

During his war service he contracted influenza and since the war has been a patient variously at the Bedford Veterans' Hospital, the Red Cross Hospital at Mount Madison, Gorham, N. H., and at Parker Hill Hospital, Roxbury, as a tuberculosis patient.

Police received a report today that Lyons was married and had a child about 15 or 17 years old. They could find no record of a marriage, however.

emperor and had kings waiting in his ante-room.

This writer recently met Ciano at dinner in Rome, and thought him an able young man. He has clear, piercing, very cold blue eyes, talked entertainingly, intelligently, about everything, except himself and his father-in-law.

Asked how it felt to fly as he had done constantly in a bombing plane over the mountains and jungles of Ethiopia, he replied, with a pleasant smile, in good English, "Oh, most interesting, yes, really very interesting," and said nothing else about his accomplishments in the air. He listens always, an important indication.

This country proposes to fortify its island possessions in the Pacific as thoroughly as Japan fortifies Pacific points that she controls, including "mandated" territory. England having finished her fortifying job, making Japan and the rest of Asia thoughtful with her great fortifications at Singapore, urges the United States and Japan to stop fortifying. There is no better adviser than dear old England.

Washington reports, "The American government has not indicated whether it will adopt England's suggestion."

Perhaps on this occasion the United States will discover somebody on this side of the Atlantic with a suggestion worth adopting, for a change.

In that case, the United States would say to England, "You attend to your affairs and we shall try to attend to ours, and show you seven or eight places in the Pacific ocean between San Francisco and Manila with fortifications and air bases that will interest you."

Japan, as usual, will do exactly as she chooses. She doesn't ask advice, does not hear it, does always as she thinks best FOR JAPAN.

4 DEMOCRATIC RALLIES DUE TONIGHT

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY

Climaxing a week of intensive campaigning which has taken them to all sections of the state, the Democratic state ticket nominees will carry their battle for ballots into Attleboro, North Attleboro, Marshfield and Foxboro tonight.

The entire state ticket will be banded together for tonight's invasion of the four rallying points. Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, candidate for secretary of state, who sprained his ankle while on the tour in western Massachusetts is expected to join his associates for tonight's rallies.

Preceding the rallies, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, will broadcast a broadside at his Republican opponent, John W. Haigis, at 7:15 p. m. over station WAAB and the Colonial network. The broadcast is titled "Fair Play."

VERBAL SLUGGING

It is expected that tonight's broadcast by State Treasurer Hurley will be the fieriest speech he has delivered in the present campaign.

The Democratic gubernatorial candidate failed to appear at rallies which were scheduled for last night in Haverhill, Amesbury, Ipswich and Newburyport. It was explained that he was resting after the western Massachusetts tour and preparing the radio address to be delivered tonight.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, swings into action again today following a day of inactivity which was interrupted only by a radio broadcast.

BOSTON RALLY

At all forums, Roosevelt is accompanied by a public stenographer who records the questions asked by the audience and the answers given by the President's son.

Roosevelt will conduct his forums during the day in Chester. He will visit Westfield, the home city of former Governor Joseph B. Ely, an avowed opponent of the New Deal, and West Springfield, in the evening.

It was announced today by Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury, that the Democratic state ticket will begin its rally scheduled in Boston next Sunday night in the Vine street municipal building, located in Ward Eight, the first district represented by Governor Curley when he entered political life 27 years ago.

Knox Sees Landon Spirit Sweeping Whole Nation

New York, Oct. 9 (INS)—A Landon spirit is sweeping from coast to coast like a tidal wave.

That's the opinion of Colonel Frank Knox, expressed as the Republican candidate for Vice-President arrived here today after having delivered an address last night in Baltimore. He declared:

"The swing to Governor Landon and the Republican Party started in Maine and has swept west like a tidal wave."

Townsend's support of Landon in California has taken that state away from the Democrats, according to Colonel Knox, and given it a "doubtful" classification, with Landon having "a slight edge."

Maryland, where the Chicago publisher delivered a slashing attack on the Roosevelt administration, is "teetering," he said.

"The polls are against us there, but we have a good chance," the Republican candidate insisted.

New Jersey is "as safe as Maine," he said. As for Pennsylvania, "that's with us strong."

Roosevelt would not be touring the West today if his high command had not warned him that things look bad for him, according to Colonel Knox.

"Roosevelt's lost Michigan," he stated flatly.

Typhoon Sweeps Luzon

Manila, Oct. 9 (AP)—A typhoon ripped through provinces of northern Luzon today, uprooting trees, destroying crops and shattering native huts. No loss of life was reported.

The Senator

Jimmy Roosevelt And Lady Shill

"You mean three stogies for a nickel," Timmy insisted firmly. "Here is one of them, and it is death to the last inch."

"I mean stooges, but I will take the stogy just the same, with many thanks."

The good Senator put a half-nelson on the stogie, and a vicious hammer-lock on the bar whiskey, burped elegantly, and then repeated:

THE SENATOR

"The Three Stooges? Have they left town? Ted Healey's stooges?"

"The only stoogies I know are the kind you snatched with your rapier-like left, Senator, but, man and boy, I have called them stogies. What is on your mind?"

The Senator gave the bottle a well-executed Irish whip, and won the fall in practically zero, flat.

"I see a lot of plump plovers walking the streets of Boston today, Timmy. They look well-fed, and self-satisfied, and you know that they have had their share of the groceries. They are walking off weight these days, after living the life of a cousin named Riley up in Springfield, and Northampton, and Pittsfield."

"What are you driving at, Senator?" asked Timmy. "In fact, what are you drunken-driving at?"

No Harm Done

"I'm driving at the fact that the Democrats and their entourage have returned to Boston, including the candidates and the stooges. Hizzeggzellancy, the Governor, had with him a general, a colonel, "Subsie" Sullivan, a barrel of apples, and the stooges who will devour the apples as soon as they walk off the steaks which they wolfed at the expense of the Governor."

"No harm done," said Timmy equably.

"The Democrats swept the whole ticket in the last election, with the exception of Dr. Joe. He was left at the post. It will be too bad for the Democracy if they fail to go through again for the good Doctor. The Italians love him."

"But it's all for one this season, and one for all," Timmy objected. "Even young Jimmy Roosevelt is here, to help the cause."

"Yes, he is," The Senator agreed, rosy with rum. "And so is his lady shill."

"A lady shill, Senator?"

"I mean a young lady who sits in the audience when Jimmy has his question-and-answer period, and asks him the question he can answer. She's a prominent society person. You've seen her pictures on the society pages. She's been graduated from one of the most select and proper schools. So she stooges for young Roosevelt, especially when he is floundering, and asks him two stock questions per evening. It's immense!"

"They had oughta go into vaudeville, maybe," Timmy suggested, "along with Al Schacht and those other comedians."

"Timmy, while I can still bob and weave my way into the subway, I am on my way. But not before I tell you this—that Governor Curley is okey-dokey with Jim Purcell. Jim has just kicked in with one grand for the Governor's campaign, and would give a great deal more if it were legal."

"Jim Purcell is a nice fellow," said Timmy.

"So is the rum. I'm staying."

1000 War Veterans To Aid Coughlin At Rally Here

More than a thousand World War veterans have volunteered their services to the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin for the huge meeting to be held in National League Field next Monday afternoon.

The tender of services came when it was learned that a demand for payment, the first from any part in the country, had been made by the police department for the detailing of police officers.

Indignant over the ukase from police headquarters, local officials of the National Union for Social Justice declared today that upwards of 300 officers would gladly give their services if Police Commissioner Eugene C. McSweeney gave them the opportunity.

Former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, Union Party vice-presidential candidate and candidate for the United States senate, is in receipt of a message from Fr. Coughlin stating he has a special message for all of New England.

The arrival in Boston of Fr. Coughlin is scheduled for Sunday.

While no estimates are being made by those in charge of the Monday meeting of the size of the crowd expected at National League Field, it is indicated that more than 40,000 can be looked for.

HURLEY-DOLAN BOND DEAL HIT BY ULIN

By L. CONANT, JR.

Further charges of a close financial relationship between State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, and Edmund L. Dolan, former city treasurer, were made today by former Senator Max Ulin at a noon day rally at 339 Washington street.

Ulin declared that the State Treasurer in June, 1932, purchased $100,000 worth of City of Lawrence bonds from Legal Securities Corporation, although the same bonds had been available for purchase directly from representatives of the City of Lawrence for more than three weeks prior to that date.

ATTACKED ON BOND DEAL

"Why do you suppose Mr. Hurley failed to buy these same $100,000 worth of Lawrence bonds directly from the city of Lawrence rather than through the 'fraudulent scheme' set up by Dolan?" Ulin asked.

"It is evident that Mr. Hurley, the Democratic nominee for Governor, does not like to have public reference made to his intimacy and close relationship with Edmund L. Dolan, whose 'fraudulent scheme,' conceived and operated by him under the name of Legal Securities Corporation, mulcted over $131,000 of the taxpayers' money in the city of Boston."

Ulin declared Hurley made the purchase on the same day, June 24, 1932, that Dolan, then treasurer of the city of Boston, bought the same bonds from Legal Securities Corporation after "stalling Lawrence officials since May 31 in their efforts for a direct sale."

With a swing of the westrn part of the state scheduled for next week, members of the State Republican ticket will concentrate today and tomorrow on suburban communities.

LODGE CHEERED

Tonight the group will speak before audiences in Salem, Peabody, Beverly and Hamilton.

The demonstrations accorded Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., militant leader of his party for the office of United States Senator, have been almost unprecedented.

Great attention was centered today upon the telegram sent to President Roosevelt by Sinclair Weeks, Chairman of the State Republican Committee concerning the plan of Governor Curley to spend $10,000 of the public funds to entertain the President on October 21 and 22.

ROOSEVELT IN IOWA

Opens Tour of U. S. Grain Belt

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 9—President Roosevelt opened his western campaign in northern Iowa today before a crowd of thousands of people who gave him a noisy welcome on the banks of the Mississippi.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was glad to be back in Iowa, that he had planned this tour with the late Democratic senator from Iowa, Louis Murphy, who was killed in an automobile accident this summer. The President said:

"I'm out here over what some people might call a political trip. But I am out here because I'm concerned with the future of the country. It rests in your hands. I'm out here to learn and what I learn will be useful to me whether I'm elected or not."

The Roosevelt special was met here by Governor Clyde L. Herring, who is running for the Senate, and a number of political and agricultural leaders from Iowa and nearby states.

From the station, the President was whisked away on a motor drive through the city, the streets of which were packed with people, despite the steady drizzle. With Governor Herring beside him in an open car, the President pulled up his overcoat collar and the rain beat steadily in his face.

Several Works Progress Administration projects were inspected, one a Mississippi river channel project in which the President was particularly interested.

Smith Charges Deal Betrayed Party

form which the Roosevelt New Deal have observed are:

1—Legislation for the regulation of stock exchanges, which Smith said 'may actually be effected if the New Deal succeeds in framing its legislation with sufficient care to observe the Constitution.

2—Repeal of the 18th Amendment (prohibition) which Smith said, with a smile, "I myself had something to do with."

As for the rest of the program embracing what he termed "the best platform ever adopted by any party within the memory of any living man," Smith declared:

"Never have I seen so complete a repudiation of a platform in letter, spirit and principle.

"The people who voted this party into power found themselves misled and betrayed by the very ones in whom they had placed their trust."

BETRAYED PARTY

Citing the AAA and President Roosevelt's failure to co-ordinate government agencies to eliminate waste and save taxpayers' money as two striking evidences of that repudiation, Smith rocked the opera house with applause when he shouted with a characteristic oratorical gesture:

"If I thought I was going to get the platform of Norman Thomas (Socialist candidate for President) instead of the Democratic party's, I'd have voted for Hoover in 1932."

Smith drew another round of cheers and applause when he declared:

"There isn't a thinking man or woman who doesn't know the Roosevelt administration threw the Democratic platform out of the window.

"A party platform is a covenant with the people—a definite promise from the party entrusted with power.

"When a man gives you his word, if he's a man he keeps his word. He doesn't do the opposite of what he promises.

"The New Deal has betrayed not only the Democratic platform but the fundamental principles on which the party is founded."

AGRICULTURE PLEDGE

Although he did not mention the Republican presidential candidate, Governor Alfred M. Landon, by name, the entire trend of Smith's speech was an appeal to "loyal Democrats" to turn their backs on the New Deal and vote for Landon.

This was Smith's second speech of the campaign. In his first in New York, he closed with a flat appeal for the election of Landon as a "patriotic duty."

In his Philadelphia address, the former presidential candidate took the Democratic platform pledge of 1932 on agriculture and declared that in instituting the AAA's program of an "economy of scarcity" that pledge was "doubly violated."

First, it violated the pledge to abide by constitutional means to provide the farmers with a living profit, he declared; and second, it was a violation of state's rights.

ECONOMIC THEORISTS

Proclaiming the welfare of agriculture the basis of prosperity for the entire nation, Smith cited statistics to show how the AAA program to curtail crops and livestock caused a rise in the cost of living and necessitated vast imports. He was loudly applauded when he cried:

"The brain trusters and college professors are trying to circumvent the laws of Nature and the law of supply and demand.

"They haven't awakened to this even yet because they are still going to the libraries for their economics."

Smith declared that with the AAA, President Roosevelt had trampled underfoot the cardinal democratic principle of state's rights in legislation and, referring to the Supreme Court ruling proclaiming the AAA unconstitutional, he added:

"When you build a house of cards and pull the bottom card out, you know what happens. The rest of the house falls."

Smith then went on to cite other New Deal legislation that fell under the axe of Supreme Court decisions. He declared that curtailed production had increased unemployment and quoted Thomas Jefferson:

"If we are directed by Washington when to sow and when to reap, we will soon want bread."

Smith declared that through the New Deal farm curtailment program the farmer was not only shut off from the world's export markets but that America actually had to import foodstuffs. He said:

"In 1932, we imported only 3000 bushels of wheat.

"In 1935, we imported 27,439,000 bushels.

"That's what happens when a great party forgets all about its platform and follows some crackpot theory."

Quoting from the homespun policies of Abraham Lincoln with regard to preserving American markets for Americans, Smith was loudly applauded when he declared:

"Abraham Lincoln was a better Democrat than the present leader of the Democratic administration.

"I used to be ready to hop all over a Republican who said anything. But I can't do it this year."

Showing how the housewife was affected by the New Deal's AAA program, Smith cited figures showing how the cost of round steak jumped from 24 cents a pound in March of 1933 to 34 cents in July of this year; and how the cost of pork chops jumped from 19 cents in March, 1933, to 34 cents in July, 1936.

CHICAGO ROARS GREETING TO GOV. LANDON

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Chicago, Oct. —While a crowd roared a greeting and bands played "O, Susanna," Governor Alfred M. Landon arrived aboard the Sunflower Special at noon today for a major campaign address tonight at the Chicago Stadium.

The Republican presidential candidate himself was first to appear on the rear platform of the train as it came to a halt in the Illinois Central Station.

It was raining steadily but nobody seemed to care. Gov. Landon didn't seem to mind the "damp" reception from the elements. He smiled his usual smile at the hundreds in the reception party.

WORE NO TOPCOAT

The G.O.P. standard-bearer was wearing a dark gray felt hat and a dark suit but no topcoat.

Plans for a welcoming parade were thrown askew by the downpour, but a thousand or so persons marched beside a band that accompanied the Kansas governor's open automobile which bore him to hotel headquarters. Gov. Landon sat in the rain throughout the ride.

En route to Chicago for a major address on the subject of balancing the federal budget, Landon told a "rear porch" audience of cheering thousands in Freeport, Ill.:

> "The New Deal is going to be beaten for the simple reason that you and I now realize the job can be done. It has left us enough shreds of Democratic self-government for the will of the American people to be expressed at the polls next month. On their ballots, they are going to demand in no uncertain way that their country be given back to them."

LASHES RELIEF FUND USE

The Republican nominee lashed into the New Deal for using relief funds in an effort to preserve its "special privileges." He conceded his own cause was being opposed by the "greatest political machine this country has ever seen," but insisted that the people were so aroused they would repudiate the administration's policies at the polls.

This fighting talk by Landon opened his tour of the four states in which many veteran political observers believe the November election will be decided. Landon's own advisers have told him he will be elected President if he carries the four states on top of his acknowledged strength in other sections of the nation.

IN FIGHTING MOOD

The Governor was in a fighting mood as he opened the tour with a "rear porch" talk in Freeport. He frankly declared there would be "no slackening" in his attack upon the New Deal until the ballots are counted in November.

> "We may be opposed by the greatest political machine this country has ever seen," he declared. "Our opponents may have billions of dollars—or your money, incidentally—in their campaign fund. But, when the people of this country become aroused, there is no stopping them."

M'Grath Bets Weeks $500 On Election

In the presence of about fifty spectators the respective chairmen of the Democratic and Republican state committees met today at Hotel Bellevue and sealed the bargain of their $500 even-money bet on the national election.

Democrat Joseph McGrath turned his $500 over to Glenwood J. Sherrard, manager of the hotel, who is acting as stakeholder. Then Republican Sinclair Weeks did likewise. Grinning broadly, the rival chairmen then shook hands.

Before the transaction was completed, however, it was understood that regardless how the election turns out, the money will be turned over to the governor-elect to be donated to some charitable purpose.

The Republican bet was made with cash. The Democratic wager was in the form of a check, drawn by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and endorsed by McGrath.

Representative Christian A. Herter, head of the Republican speakers' bureau, and Charles Nichols, executive secretary of the Republican State Committee, accompanied Chairman Weeks to the meeting.

The bet was made as a result of McGrath's acceptance of Weeks' offer to put up $500 on Landon carrying Massachusetts.

'Fireworks King' Offers 5 to 3 Odds on Lodge

On the heels of the $500 bet by Republican and Democratic State Committee chairmen on the national election, Samuel Goodwin of Boston, describing himself as "The Fireworks King," appeared at the State House today with $5000 in cash to bet on the U. S. Senate contest.

He said he would give odds of 5 to 3 on Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., and announced that he had $20,000 in all to wager against Governor Curley's chances of winning. Democratic Chairman Joseph McGrath, who had made the earlier bet, arranged for Goodwin to meet some Curley supporters later.

HUNDREDS SEE SEA RESCUE

San Francisco, Oct. 9 (AP)—The crew of the freighter Ohioan, wedged on the beach near Seal Rocks, was removed by coast guard surf boats today, while hundreds of spectators watched the rescue.

Only unlicensed officers and two cooks were left on the stricken vessel, pinioned amidships by a jagged rock.

The powerful coast guard boats approached the Ohioan through heavy seas to remove the sailors and their baggage.

George E. Wilcox, chief engineer of the freighter, was suffering severely from rheumatism and was taken to a hospital. The other men were brought ashore near Fisherman's Wharf.

Salvage operations were to start in attempts to save the vessel's 2500-ton cargo before the craft is pounded to pieces by the heavy waves.

however, and the three surviving bandits fled as he blazed away at them.

Sales Manager George Williams who stood by Meisel's side as the dozen or more pistol shots blazed across a 15-foot office space, was also cut by the flying glass.

The trio, as soon as their guns were emptied, raced out and into an automobile which they had left parked, with a confederate at the wheel in Crescent avenue, by the side of the plant.

THREATEN GIRL'S LIFE

The car raced down Crescent avenue, eastwards, as police radio broadcast orders to all cruiser cars to swing into assigned places and bottle up the streets leading from the district.

The robbers arrived exactly ten minutes after the armored bank car which left the weekly payroll for about 250 employes.

The four men walked slowly across Crescent avenue and into the first floor offices. The first person they encountered was Telephone Operator Madeline Elwood. Thrusting a gun at her face, one ordered:

"Get away from those phones and get into the corner or you'll get plugged!"

COMES OUT SHOOTING

Another faced Clerk Mollie Sibley and demanded:

"Where's that money!"

She didn't answer.

"You two get up against the wall!" was the order.

"And you," one said, thrusting a gun in the direction of another clerk, Anna Meisel, "where's the dough?"

She didn't answer, but President Meisel suddenly appeared from his inner office as these girls and others were being herded against the wall.

He came out shooting.

Across the short gap, the bullets flew. The man believed to be Freedman went down under the first fusillade from Meisel's pistol.

The other three blazed away at the president, cutting his outline in the partition against which he stood. But he wasn't even grazed by the bullets, so unnerved were the robbers.

The alarm had been sounded by then, and as soon as the robbers realized their foray was in vain, they turned and fled to their waiting car.

AFTER THE GREATEST FINISH under fire in golfing history: Tony Manero gets set for hearty eating by smoking Camels. The gallery went wild when Tony Manero came crashing through with a spectacular 282—to win the 1936 National Open Golf Tournament. In spite of the tension and excitement of the long grind, Tony shows no trace of the ordeal. His digestion stands the strain. As Tony himself says: "I'll go on record any time as one who thanks Camels for stimulating digestion. 'For digestion's sake—smoke Camels!' hits the ball right on the nose. I feel cheered up while I'm eating—enjoy my food more—and have a feeling of ease afterward when I enjoy Camels along with my meals. Camels set me right."

ALL-AROUND ATHLETE FROM TEXAS. Basketball, hurdling, sprinting, throwing the baseball—Miss Mary Carter has reached peak form in them all. She says: "Since I've learned how pleasant Camels make my mealtime, I wouldn't be without them. Camels are so mild—so delightfully cheering. And they never get on my nerves."

"FOR DIGESTION'S SAKE ... SMOKE CAMELS!"

WHETHER YOU ARE CATCHING A QUICK BITE OR DINING IN STATE—

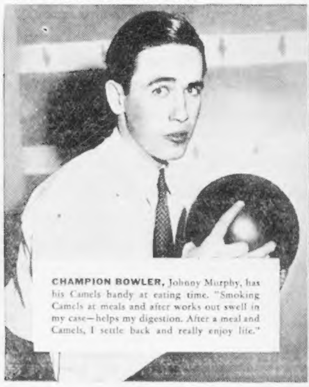
Copyright, 1936, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.



CHAMPION BOWLER, Johnny Murphy, has his Camels handy at eating time. "Smoking Camels at meals and after works out swell in my case—helps my digestion. After a meal and Camels, I settle back and really enjoy life."

"WHAT A PLEASANT AID to digestion Camels are!" says this busy homemaker, Mrs. Charles Sickles. "They add their own special zest to any meal. No matter how jumpy I may feel, Camels set me right. So many of the women I know smoke Camels. They appeal to a woman's taste."

Camels increase digestive activity—encourage a sense of well-being!

WITH healthy nerves and good digestion on your side, you're bound to feel on top of the world. When you smoke Camels with your meals and after, Camels help in two special ways: Tension is lessened and Camels promote digestive well-being.

So enjoy your Camels between courses and after eating. Strain eases. The flow of digestive fluids, so vital to proper nutrition, is speeded up. Alkalinity is increased. Food tastes more delicious and you get more good from what you eat.

For good cheer—for invigorating "lift"—for matchless taste—and "for digestion's sake"—the answer is the same: Camels. Camels set you right! And they don't get on your nerves or tire your taste.

Cardinal Pacelli Seeks Seclusion

New York, Oct. 9 (INS)—Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, who arrived yesterday in New York, went into seclusion today at the country estate of Mrs. Nicholas S. Brady near North Hills, L. I.

The Cardinal was accompanied by several dignitaries of the Catholic Church on a motor trip from New York City to Long Island. After his arrival, special guards were posted at the main entrance of the Brady estate, and admittance was denied to newspapermen and photographers.

It was explained that the Cardinal was here on a vacation to obtain a much needed rest.

Tobin to Explain Union Position

Washington, Oct. 9—A representative of the Seattle Central Labor Union will appear before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor next Tuesday to explain the Seattle body's position in the strike of news room employes of the Seattle Post Intelligencer.

This was announced here last night by Daniel Tobin, president of the International Teamsters Union and a member of the executive council of the A. F. of L. now holding its regular quarterly meeting here.

Tobin said the Seattle Central body had been requested by President William Green, before the executive council convened, to send an official spokesman to Washington to give the council a first-hand statement in explanation of the whole situation.

He pointed out that in as much as the A. F. of L. had chartered the Seattle Central Union it had a logical interest in and a certain responsibility for actions of that body. For that reason the entire council wanted to hear what the Seattle body had to say.

W. R. Hearst Praised For Red Exposures

Pittsburgh, Oct. 9—In an interview with a labor reporter upon his arrival here Wednesday Daniel Tobin, president of the International Teamsters' Union and chairman of the labor committee of the Democratic party, said:

"William Randolph Hearst certainly has done one thing. He should be commended for his exposure of Communism in the United States.

"Communism has made inroads in this country. There is no place for it in America.

"If the American working man is not permitted to openly belong to a union organization of his own choice he will join secretly with something else."

He was asked:

"Do you mean Communism?"

He replied

"I mean just that."

A. F. L. Dodges Action On Typo Union

Washington, Oct. 9 (US)—Crushing a stiff opposition, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in secret session here, has informally decided to sidestep demands for suspension of the powerful International Typographical Union.

Instead of any drastic action at this meeting of the council, members agreed to throw the entire question of the union's status into the lap of the A. F. of L. Convention in Tampa next month.

The I. T. U. at its annual convention in Colorado Springs last month adopted a resolution giving "moral and financial" support to John L. Lewis and his "rebel" committee for industrial organization.

The convention, however, did not vote for outright affiliation with the C. I. O.

Formal action by the council settling the relationship of the typographical union with the A. F. of L. will be taken some time next week.

But she changed her tune when she tried to work the many strings which controlled it and found it a difficult task to make it follow her movements as a shadow would. Sue and the puppet took part in a recent fashion show at Ten Acres. She is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carl of Brookline and made her debut at a luncheon last week.

Everywhere you hear the echo
Landon's on his way to fame
Every man and every woman puts an X mark by his name
Honest policies his standard 'Al' will bring us back we know
Nevermore will donkeys tell us us how to waste our dough.

(Refrain)
Alfred Landon, you'll get the White House key!
We know you have the [illegible]
right [illegible]

Eyes that once were closed are opened Landon has no "New Deal" dreams
East and West can never forget it paying for F. D. R.'s schemes
Help and Hope and Strength and Wisdom are in Landon's make up box
Numbers now will replace letters
Triumph comes where Landon knocks

Elephants will win election Landon leads in every state ERA and federal projects put aside they're out of date
Heavy taxes will be lifted as the
G. O. P. steps in
No more stuff they call "boondoggling" trust and truth will soon begin

Eager Democrats are leery Landon's

Easy livings of the donkey put their party on a crutch
Hoist the flag and sing loud praises!
Alfred Landon, here's our

Carl Morris Looms As New Tarzan

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 9—Don't tell me that Tarzan is about to join the unemployed! Please don't distress me with the news that Johnny Weissmuller, who has become as synonymous with "Tarzan" as ham and eggs, may retire in favor of a new jungle inhabitant.

with her dramatic role in "Mother Carey's Chickens" in which she goes romantic with Joel McCrea in place of "Swinging" with Fred Astaire.

There was a great to-do when Jean Harlow changed her locks from platinum to brownette and RKO expects similar reverberations from their announcement.

But how are we going to continue calling her Ginger when she's no longer a redhead?

Duffy Cornell, veteran newspaperman, has now joined the ranks of movie authors.

Duffy wrote a story called "Mister," a baseball yarn glorifying the late John J. McGraw which also includes many of the picturesque characters who made baseball history such as Christy Mathewson.

He submitted it to Wesley Ruggles who liked the idea so much that he purchased it with a plan to have it ready for release when the baseball season opens next year.

Wesley, who went to New York for the World Series, is putting some writers right now for his baseball epic.

Movie Stars at Home -:- By Peggy Doyle

Frank McHugh Acclaimed In His New Film

Hollywood, Oct. 9—There's no pleasing some people's children. They're starring Frank McHugh in Warner Brothers' "Three Men on a Horse" and is he dancing in the streets?

[illegible] perverse Irish lad.

"There they go," says he, "spoiling all my comfortable security. Now I'll have to build a wall around my house and wear Garbo glasses and develop a Simone Simon temperament. A very discouraging business, this movie business I'm in. Woe is me!"

[illegible]

"We character actors get all the gravy," says Frankie, curling up his nose to match the crinkle in his reddish brown hair and giving out with that vacant-eyed look that is so disarming from wherever you sit in your neighborhood movie-house.

Meaty Parts

"I can't honest to truth. We get a meaty part that puts itself over, despite the actor. We haven't the responsibility of carrying the play along as the principals do. If they fail to carry it, they're on the downgrade. But if we give them a laugh we're on the up and up and we're credited with saving the picture. It's a darn comfortable existence being a character actor or a comedian, and so secure.

"And now," moans this outstanding screen comedian, with the hint of tragedy in his voice, "my nice, easy going existence is a thing of the past. If my Elmer in 'Three Men on a Horse' doesn't get them rolling in the aisles, then I'm a dud and on the way out.

[illegible] you at [illegible] If you can get in [illegible] everything, but a [illegible] into his [illegible] Frankie McHugh's lugubrious outburst was the attractive living room of his Hollywood home.

Like many of the new homes now being erected by the movie stars, the McHugh home is Monterey Colonial, fast becoming the prevailing architecture of California and, in the opinion of experts, much more appropriate to present-day California than is the once-popular Spanish type of architecture.

It is a long, low, two-storied house with a white stucco exterior and a shingled roof. The living room is a huge, pleasant room, overlooking the wide, rolling lawn on one side and the garden with its old-fashioned tree-swings for the children on the other.

In June, 1933, McHugh married a divorcee, the former Miss Dorothy Spencer of Hartford, Ct., and has two step-children, Peter, seven and one-half years, and Susan, four and one-half years, and a 19-months-old son, Michael.

"We wanted a place that would be big enough for the children to play and grow up in unrestrained and not lavish enough to give them delusions of grandeur."

Peter at the minute was swinging vigorously in the swing pending from the huge live-oak that is one of many in the spacious grounds surrounding the McHugh home.

His baby brother, Michael, was in his play-pen in the far corner of the grounds being amused by his pretty, dark-haired mother.

It was a sort of reunion, for the McHugh parents have just returned from a visit in New England, where they visited Mrs. McHugh's childhood home in Hartford, as well as friends in Boston and Plimpton, Mass.

Up in Connecticut, they paid a long visit to Dorothy McHugh's childhood home, a charming old house on the topmost hill in a very hilly section, according to McHugh.

"It was just the kind of place I've always dreamed of retiring to," said Frankie. "I left it thinking to myself what a delightful place for Dorothy and me to grow old in after the children marry and leave us. My mood was very mellow, and I found myself mentally furnishing each room."

Since Frank McHugh is only 37 years of age, there really is no sense in wasting sympathy over his wrecked retirement plans, especially since his past is a succession of successes.

His first professional engagement was in a child role with his parents, Edward A. and Catherine McHugh, in "For Her Children's Sake," which toured one-night stands through New England in 1909.

When he was 17 and attending school in Pittsburgh, Frank became stage manager for the Marguerite Bryant Players at the Empire Theater there. He first [illegible] crashed Broadway in 1925 with a part in James Gleason's "The Fall Guy." In 1930 he made his screen debut in a [illegible] "If Men Played Cards as Women Do."

He went to Hollywood in 1930, and from "Top Speed," "The Dawn Patrol," [illegible] "A Midsummer Night's Dream," [illegible] "Bullets or Ballots," and "Three Men on a Horse" [illegible] comedy [illegible]

Frank McHugh, New England actor, who has made good in Hollywood. Picture taken at his beautiful Monterey-style home in Film Capital.

Another one of the interesting at-home interviews by Miss Doyle in tomorrow's Boston Evening American. This time with Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, the unique dancing pair of filmland.

HARVARD'S FIXED RENTAL ON A DOWNTOWN THEATER PROPERTY is so high that Boston may get a new street. The college is landlord of considerable property in Massachusetts. This particular piece has a popular restaurant paying rent. A request will be made shortly that the city approve a new thoroughfare, connecting two main streets, and calling for demolition of the restaurant which abuts one of the largest theaters . . . City inspectors found that a 200 year-old piece of oak tree, 10 feet long and hollowed out, was acting as plumbing after a leak had been discovered at the Silver Dollar Bar. Piping has been substituted . . A patient at the Boston City Hospital died early today to the strains of Tosti's "Goodbye" received over his radio. A local station got the request, checked back with the hospital and quickly put the number on the air.

Hangover Story:

Jitters after a night of carousal and taking the barber treatment, a [illegible] end of N. F. T., radio editor of this newspaper, was under a swath of towels when a strange fellow stuck his head in the barber shop door and yelled:

"Hey, Mr. Smith, your house is on fire."

The ailing customer shook off his towels, raced out the door, and ran a block and a half down the street. Then he stopped in his tracks.

"What the dickens am I running for?" he checked himself. "My name isn't Smith!"

'Anthony Adverse' Greater on Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

Picturization of Hervey Allen's best seller, [illegible] the Paramount and Fenway theaters, has retained [illegible] ents that made "Anthony Adverse," [illegible] the literary market.

History, panorama, adventure, picturesqueness and the romance which made up the literary titan of the 20th century have been transcribed faithfully to the screen by Warner Bros.

Olivia de Havilland

Indeed, in the transition from the printed word to the screen the story of Anthony Adverse has gained—rather than suffered any loss.

Doubly vivid becomes the romantic career of the orphan [illegible] successful merchant Anthony. Not subject to the limitations of the printed page, the boundless scope of the screen gives the majesty proper to the telling of such a story. The film has been done with a grand sweep.

We follow Anthony from the convent where he had been brought as a foundling to the Casa de Bonnyfeather to Havana, to Africa, back to Italy and finally to America.

From the pages of the novel we meet again Angela, Don Luis, John Bonnyfeather, Faith Paleologus, Vincent Nolte and so on down the line.

Olivia de Havilland, fairly recent to Hollywood ranks, makes a warm, [illegible] beautiful Angela. Her [illegible] she has more than beauty to recommend her to a permanent place in Hollywood's firmament.

To the meaty role of Anthony, which [illegible] as [illegible] brings the [illegible] varied [illegible] the part to the [illegible]

PRIMER FOR HARVARD STUDENTS by ANN MARSTERS

Question Box for Harvard Students

Attention class. Before the Primer draws to a close, you'll [illegible] a chance—each and every one of you—to make your education complete. But definitely. This [illegible] how you do [illegible].

[illegible] Marsters

Is there anything that puzzles you? Anything you don't understand? Any questions you'd like to ask? Well, my [illegible] and you shall be told. Doesn't matter what it is (within the bounds of reason). Doesn't matter if it's your heart or your head that's troubling you. [illegible] your problems to THE HARVARD PRIMER QUESTION BOX, at the Boston American. Ann Marsters will not only consider your problems—she will answer them in the revealing columns of the Harvard Primer. Your names will be withheld from publication, so there's nothing to worry about. It's the chance of a Harvard life time. And it might be mad fun.

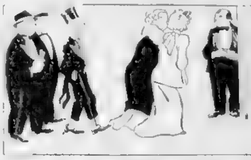
Radcliffe will always welcome you

In Case You're Planning Some High-Class Crashing

LESSON 13

I[illegible] a veteran crasher we [illegible] to crash this and [illegible] best of Harvard men, [illegible]

[illegible]



Follow the crowd and save—when crashing

The correct term for this is [illegible]. You ar[illegible] the show starts and [illegible] approach one of the [illegible] about to enter the [illegible]. Ask her if she [illegible]. Of course she [illegible]. Of course you [illegible] in the [illegible] so [illegible] explaining [illegible] to the man at the door.

O[illegible] you may figure [illegible] own way of getting to the front of the house. And you may also forget (if [illegible]) that supper date at [illegible] Waldorf or was it the Ritz?

Harvard Indifference is essential

OPERAS: An excellent way to crash the opera is to get yourself a [illegible] as an extra in the chorus for an evening. Then, if you'd rather hear the opera than be in it, you may easily find the passage that leads to the audience.

Incidentally, if you're not going to crash, but plan to take a girl to the opera, be sure to read up on the subject in advance. She'll be terribly impressed by your knowledge. But if things really get too much for you, just stare at her with a depthless expression and say "After all, Wagner is Wagner." That should end the discussion—in your favor.

On the other hand, if it's a symphony concert you take your girl to, you needn't let her questions become embarrassing. In such a case, you can say "After all, Bach is Bach." Then you might add, so she'll think you're just awfully clever "And no Bachtalk from you young lady."

FOOTBALL GAMES: The best and most interesting way to crash a football game is to hide in the big brass drum which is part of the Harvard band. If you can get in, you ought to be able to get out.

HOCKEY GAMES: For a small sum you can get an excellent seat—like this: Buy a general admission ticket. Then, for an extra quarter, an usher will fix you up at the ringside. In this way you may get a $2.20 ticket for around 75 cents.

FACULTY MEETING: Now how would you like to go to a nice faculty meeting. All it requires is a beard and a top-hat and a rather pre-occupied expression. You won't be detected because most of the members don't know who's on the board anyway. If you attend just after exams, you might be able to put in a decisive word or two and [illegible] a [illegible] round B.

INTERVIEWS [illegible] ple, [illegible] tresses and [illegible] person [illegible] answer [illegible] the message.

All [illegible] wait at [illegible] which the [illegible] person [illegible] soon be dashing. Accost him [illegible] joke [illegible].

RADCLIFFE DANCES: [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS: [illegible] Always [illegible] Harvard man [illegible] of [illegible].

So keep [illegible] your state's impress [illegible] blocked [illegible] cleaned. [illegible] can't fail to go a long way in the world. If you [illegible] me just wait and see.

There'll be a story about Harvard men in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. The subject will be: "What the girls really think about Harvard students." And if that isn't a subject to read about, then what is? Swell Sunday reading; and you may well believe it.

CurleyGets Wire, Calls Off Party

GOVERNOR SAYS IT WAS 'JOKE'

The proposal to [illegible] $10,000 of the state's money to entertain President Roosevelt when he visits Boston October 23 [illegible] off and by reason of the President['s] [illegible] Governor Curley announced today.

[illegible]

"We were going to spend our own money anyhow," Governor Curley remarked after he had made this announcement. "That appropriation by the executive council was just to rib a few people.

"As a matter of fact under the law I could have spent up to $10,000 for the President's visit; the Republicans [illegible] passed that law."

"Only a Joke"

But my request for the fund was just a joke and the Republicans were just trying to embarrass me.

[illegible]

"My father has requested me to thank you for your respect and thoughtfulness in asking the governor's council for the appropriation of $10,000 for the celebration of his visit to Massachusetts October 23.

"He feels, however that because this particular occasion is in no way official and is part of his campaign to ask the support of voters of our Commonwealth for continuance of the Democratic administration this occasion should be considered as political.

"May I therefore respectfully ask you to withhold expenditure of the appropriation made."

Jurors Rebuked For Freeing 2

Telling them that it was perfectly apparent they should not sit further in Suffolk criminal court, Judge Allen G. Buttrick today discharged jurors who had just returned a verdict in the fourth session.

"It's the first time in 10 years I've had to do this," the court remarked.

The jury had returned a sealed verdict of not guilty in the cases of Fouche Thomas of Grant street and John W. Barber of Dell street, both Somerville. They were accused of disorderly conduct in Scollay square.

Patrolmen John J. Cashman and Michael J. Reagan of Charlestown division had testified they were eyewitnesses to the offenses.

Relax for Loveliness

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

TO APPEAR thirtyish in your late forties, learn to relax like a rag doll. It's tension that makes wrinkles, and [illegible] will keep [illegible] about your [illegible]

If you are one of those thin, tense individuals, you probably have a bad case of hurryitis [illegible] rushing to do this, straining to do that.

You allow yourself too little time to make too many appointments and fret about being late. When you hop in a taxi to save [illegible] it doesn't save your nerves. Instead of relaxing and getting your [illegible] you perch [illegible] the seat and tell [illegible] step on it!" You [illegible] breath and tied up in [illegible] chances are you [illegible] an easy going [illegible]

Some [illegible] are born relaxers [illegible] to [illegible] slowly, and you may have to force yourself [illegible] You might [illegible] the advice of an [illegible] for which he claims the secret of keeping young. He says: "[illegible] much [illegible] a little bit but nothing matters too much." This neat bit of philosophy would keep us from making mountains out of molehills and help us to achieve calmness and serenity.

Complete relaxation means that you must free yourself of muscular as well as mental tension. Teach your muscles to relax. Flop down on the bed and let yourself go limp as a rag doll. Fling one arm out and let it drop [illegible] Now do the same with the other, and let them fall back [illegible] Just let go with all [illegible] Remember [illegible] and this is no time to plan meals, revise the budget or work out problems in child psychology. Make your mind a perfect blank, or think of something restful [illegible] waves lapping gently on the [illegible] of perfume on your pillow and make believe you are fast asleep under a blossom apple tree. You may not go to sleep, but 20 minutes [illegible]

To relax, stop hurrying, allow [illegible] time for doing things so that you will not feel pushed, and remember that nothing matters too much.

A Bad Slam

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It is a serious error to imagine that the message carried by a strong bid can be effaced by subsequent sign-offs.

In today's hand a very bad slam contract was reached almost solely because of one single response of the North player.

South dealer

Both sides [illegible]

North: ♠ K 10 9 6, ♡ 8 6 4 3, ◇ —, ♣ K Q 9 8 7

West: ♠ 7 3 2, ♡ A 9 5 [illegible], ◇ J [illegible] 6, ♣ 8

East: ♠ Q 8 5 4, ♡ [illegible], ◇ A K 7 2, ♣ 5 4 2

South: ♠ A J, ♡ K Q J [illegible], ◇ Q 9 [illegible] 4, ♣ A 3

The bidding

South	West	North	East
1 [illegible]	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 [illegible]	Pass
6 [illegible]	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

It was North [illegible] over the one [illegible] the direct cause of the subsequent [illegible] was not wise in his opinion two clubs was the best bid [illegible] would not have been fatal if North had not followed up over South's non-committal [illegible] of one no trump with such a strong bid as three clubs.

South too, it must be [illegible] pressed in reaching the slam but he thought that he would find infinitely better [illegible] his partner's hand and he knew that there was a good [illegible] double was based more on the fact that he [illegible] sound of the bidding [illegible] he could defeat the [illegible] himself.

Obviously he was [illegible] defensive support from [illegible] partner.

West opened a small diamond and dummy ruffed. A low heart covered by East's Jack and South's Queen, was taken by the Ace and diamonds were continued. Again, dummy had to ruff. Declarer was now very much up against it. He knew that West had three hearts left and that it was futile to try to draw them.

CONTRACT DEFEATED

Naturally he could not see the Queen of spades in East's hand and dared not take that finesse, so he decided to cash as many club tricks as possible. He led to the Ace and returned a small club to dummy. West, however, ruffed [illegible] third round. There went dummy's last trump, and the ten spot at that!

Declarer now made the [illegible] of letting West ruff a [illegible] he should have led to his spade Ace and drawn at least one round of trumps. West gratefully ruffed the club and played a fourth round of diamonds to his partner's Ace.

Then a lead of the fourth round of clubs by East assured West's [illegible] of trumps for the fourth setting trick. Declarer should have saved one trick, but even at the best the slam contract was not only defeated but disgraced.

UTILITY Stocks FEATURE

SITUATION EXPLAINED

By LESLIE GOULD

International News Service Financial Writer

New York, Oct. 9 (INS)—The public utility stocks in the last two days have been a feature of the market, being turned over in large volume, and there have been the usual crop of Wall Street explanations, some right and many cockeyed.

The situation in the power industry and in the utility stocks is as follows:

[illegible] better than 30 per cent ahead of 1929 and 1930 levels. Earnings also have improved in spite of taxes, governmental interference and harassment.

2. After elections probably beginning the first of next year the other companies will follow the lead of Commonwealth & Southern Corp. and inaugurate a program of rate reductions.

3. There is a suit now before the courts in Knoxville brought by 18 companies in the Tennessee valley area testing the constitutionality of the TVA experiment. Even the government's counsel admit it is a real case.

4. Conferences are now on between the government and the Commonwealth & Southern for a renewal of the contract with [illegible] the TVA power.

[illegible] holding company act. One action was brought by the Securities and Exchange Commission against the Electric Bond & Share group of companies to force them to register under the act. This case has recently been postponed with the outlook of no decision for a year. The government's administration has a better than even chance of winning this. The other litigation over the holding company law, which is something apart from the TVA, is being brought by such holding companies as North American against the Securities and Exchange Commission. These are stronger cases from the utility's standpoint.

6. The decision in the New York [illegible] that a municipally owned power plant may sell its [illegible] the same as a private company rather than at [illegible] The Public Service Commission had ordered the municipal [illegible] Counties [illegible] power at cost. Corporate Dividend Payments

The directors of 731 corporations voted in August to increase dividend payments to stockholders.

As a result, dividends declared in that month amounted to $334,619,487, the largest sum for any August since 1931, and the highest amount of this year since last May.

The chart shows by corporate divisions how dividend payments declared last August compare with those of a year before.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Oct. 9—Wall Street's almost unanimously bullish attitude toward the share market is completely overlooking the fantastic price advances that have taken place from the depression lows.

Looking back on these comparisons gives confidence to many speculators even though it can be easily demonstrated that most of the recoveries are justified on earnings and dividend restorations. Nevertheless many astute market students are beginning to swerve to the viewpoint that as the rise becomes more rapid and speculative interest broadens the market is entering a phase lending itself more readily to greater risk if a sudden decline occurs. These individuals are cautioning that it is poor policy to assume that because a security has performed in a certain way in the past it will again perform that way in the future.

G. R. Kinney Plans To Retire Arrears

Current reports are to the effect that G. R. Kinney & Co. will shortly announce preliminary steps to retire arrears on the $8 cumulative preferred stock amounting to $44 a share. This is expected to be done in two operations, the first calling for an offer to bondholders providing for extension of the 7½ per cent notes due in December at a reduced interest rate. Immediately upon the completion of this it is expected holders of the present 8 per cent preferred will be offered an exchange into new preferred bearing a smaller dividend rate.

No cash distribution will be included in the proposal, according to the reports.

Northwest Freight Traffic Outlook

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad freight traffic has gained up sharply and currently is running 42 per cent above a year ago. The Western grain and fruit loads this quarter present a problem in traffic forecasts, the results of which will probably not be known until the actual loadings have revealed themselves in the weeks between now and the opening of 1937. The question is whether increased movement of manufactured goods and other commodities will offset expected losses in grainings traffic." Pacific [illegible]

START Boulder Dam CURRENT

TRANSMISSION TOMORROW

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 9—Tomorrow the people of Los Angeles will celebrate the symbolic first transmission of electric current to Southern California from the gigantic Boulder Dam, nee Hoover Dam.

[illegible] Los Angeles, Glendale and Burbank [illegible] Southern [illegible]

"Gross revenues derived from service to these municipalities amounted to $3,355,000 in 1935. However, the price received by the company from the sale of this wholesale power is very low, with only a narrow margin above cost of generation and transmission.

"One of the objects of our company's aggressive load building campaign which has been under way for more than two years, was the replacement of this low priced wholesale business with retail business which, because it utilizes our distribution facilities and requires more service from our organization, justly commands a higher rate. A considerably smaller volume of this latter class of load will restore that portion of our net earnings now derived from the larger volume of low rate wholesale business.

"As a matter of fact our gross operating revenue during the latter part of 1935, after deducting that received from these three cities, exceeded our total operating gross, including the three cities, for the same period in 1934. In other words, if we had lost the wholesale business of these three cities at the end of 1934 our gross in December, 1935, would yet have exceeded our gross in December, 1934.

"This indicates not only the extent to which our sales efforts have been successful in anticipating the loss of this wholesale business, but also should reassure those who have feared that the loss of this business to Boulder Dam power would be a very serious shock to our company."

WOOL Goods Trade BETTER

SAYS N. Y. WOOL TOP EXCHANGE

New York, Oct. 9.—Business in wool goods is improving, according to the New York Wool Top Echange Service. Mills are writing more business on men's wear suitings for spring, and prices are definitely stronger.

Strong wool markets and [illegible] are forcing mills to readjust prices in an upward direction. Mills are also faced with higher costs beginning next year, when social security laws become operative in a number of states. Demand for women's wear fabrics is slowing up due to the fact that most mills have completed fall production and are not quite ready as yet to begin vigorous promotions of spring lines.

The Exchange Service says that new business in men's wear markets is reported to be averaging about 2,700,000 yards a week, while [illegible] 000 yards a week, the result being that mills are building up backlogs that are bound to force increased operations in the near future.

Summer Goods

Advances on summer goods announced during the week came as a result of the business booked on these fabrics. Orders to date on tropicals and gabardines are reported 20 to 25 per cent ahead of [illegible]

[illegible] Meanwhile, business on spring suitings continues to gain [illegible] will be named on these fabrics in [illegible] about used up their stocks of [illegible] wool and are being compelled to pay full asking prices of spinners and wool dealers.

Demand for overcoatings is improving and mills look forward to a brisk spot business in these fabrics in the next two months. Many [illegible] ming into heavy volume.

The fall season in women's wear fabrics is coming to an end, but there are a number of mills which are doing a brisk business on a variety of items. Sports woolens, fleeces and tweeds in football colors [illegible] ness remains to be written on dressy coatings. Business in garments is better. HOPEFUL VIEWS

Expressed BY BUSINESS Men

By B. C. FORBES

Chicago, Oct. 9.—"It seems probable that 1937 will be an even better business year than 1936."

"Our business is tremendous and going ahead of 1929."

[illegible] people have taken the bit in their teeth.

Notwithstanding the serious effects of the drouth on extensive areas, the situation of the American farmer is on the whole much better than it has been in a long while. Taking the country as a whole, the improvement in prices of agricultural products more than outweighs the shortage of production caused by the drouth. In view of the recent copious rains, it would seem reasonable to hope that sub soil moisture will be replenished and that next year will show still further increase of agricultural prosperity.

"In spite of the adverse conditions referred to, improvement in our business noted earlier in the year continues, and 1936 should show a greater volume of business than 1935. Barring any unpredictable calamity to our agriculture, it seems probable that 1937 will be even a better business year than 1936.

"Even underlying causes of this improvement in agriculture and in the agricultural implement industry are not hard to discern. The shortage of implements on American farms, due to the long depression in agriculture, has not been made up as yet. With the current and prospective improvement in their financial situation the farmers will continue to replenish their farm operating equipment. Then too there is a strong tendency to take advantage of the various new developments and improvements achieved by the implement industry in the last few years.

"As a result of the general industrial recovery, and of the extension and improvement of our line of trucks, demand keeps on broadening and increasing in activity."

[illegible] Roebuck & Co.:

"Business is still on the up grade. Our own business is tremendous and going ahead of 1929.

"Most retailers throughout the country, with the exception of a limited number in the drouth section, are getting good business. This, in turn, is going back to the manufacturers.

"Our observation is that most mills and factories are pretty busy. Payrolls are constantly being increased.

"I believe that the masses—the wage earners and the farmers—are beginning to have confidence—more confidence than the average business man. This is leading to increased spending.

"As far as I can see, nothing can stop our upward movement except a currency war, which I do not anticipate, or a military war, which I do not look for within the next year."

"Our business is splendid. It comes from practically every class of business in every state.

"The outlook is ever better, capital investments are being made; employment is increasing; profits are being made and [illegible]

"We feel that even better business is ahead of us for several years to come and we are planning accordingly."

McCRAY SHOWS ZIP AT GUARD

By BILL GRIMES

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 9—Early this morning, the vanguard of the Holy Cross game crowd began to arrive and indications point to one of the busiest week-ends in years.

There were only 200 unsold seats for tomorrow's game and Bill McCarter's crew [illegible] box office wickets [illegible]

[illegible]

Five years ago in the last meeting Holy Cross was an odds-on favorite. Capt. John McEwen, who was the head coach, brought a highly rated squad here back in 1931 but the Big Green sprung a real surprise when it turned back the Crusaders, 14 to 7.

11th Meeting

Again Holy Cross is the favorite but as to whether Dartmouth will be able to duplicate its feat of 1931 remains to be seen.

[illegible]

The Big Green's activities for today will be confined to a short signal drill and then the varsity squad will retire giving way to the Crusaders, who will hold an hour's drill on the Memorial Field gridiron late this afternoon.

Purple En Route to Hanover

ANDERSON LEADS 40 PLAYERS

By WALTER KILEY

Worcester, Oct. 9—The official Holy Cross football party [illegible] Hanover this morning.

[illegible]

Worcester bookmakers were offering odds of 7 to 5 with Holy Cross the favorite this morning. There was little Dartmouth coin in sight.

Holy Cross was never better off physically than on its departure. Only minor ailments were in evidence. And these were not such as to cause Dr. Eddie and Eddie worry in this direction.

Anderson intends to stick to the starting lineup he named earlier this week with a backfield of Rex Kid, Vin Dougherty, Len Kuziora and Joe Yablonski; and a line of Captain Curley and Shields, ends, Gavin and Moncewicz, tackles; [illegible]are and Luciano, guards; and Mautner, center.

Before tomorrow night's shadows comes creeping in from the nearby mountains, new Purple stars [illegible]

Holy Cross has the most [illegible] youngsters in its history, a flock of fine running, passing and kicking backs, some of whom will get their first major opportunity in varsity competition.

There are sophomores such as Henry Ouellette of Lawrence, [illegible] Osmanski of Providence, [illegible] Renz of Philadelphia and others who offensively carry powerful weapons, now being sighted, which will some time soon strike terror into enemy camps. The [illegible] may explode tomorrow.

Anderson may make several backfield shifts. But it is almost a foregone conclusion that his linemen will be forced to stay in the thick of the going as long as they can stand it.

He is frankly distressed at the very thought of making frontier substitutions. He has replacements which many coaches would be proud to boast. But there is a decided drop in first and second line calibre.

Ends Maddocks' Grid Chances

Ray Maddocks, Boston University's veteran quarterback, lies in Massachusetts Memorial hospital with a broken leg today while his mates are in Toledo.

One of fate's cruelest pranks occurred yesterday just before the Terriers left for the Mid-West. Maddocks, working out on a tackling dummy, fell improperly and snapped his left leg.

Last year he broke the ankle on the same leg in mid-season and was out the rest of the season. It's really a tough break for a great kid.

'PURES' Urged to HURRY

CHLUDINSKI ENTERS

The day of the first trials is only a short distance away.

Just one week from Monday, the All-America Amateur Boxing Tournament sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser gets underway.

Interest is particularly keen in the tourney as entries from New England's crack amateurs keep coming in. It is not only the beautiful Gruen watches which the winners and runnerups will receive but the honor of winning one of the titles in the eight classes.

From the standpoint of the fans, the heavyweights always attract the major portion of attention and in the past there has been a dearth of heavyweights in amateur circles.

At this tournament, however, heavyweights from all points in New England will come forth to battle for the honor of winning the division honors.

Well Known

The best known is Frank Chludinski of Hyde Park, who was a sensation in local heavyweight circles last year.

With very little experience, Frank went right to the top in a few shows and won the New England championship and the right to represent this section in the nationals.

He was eliminated in the first bout for the national title but this came because of inexperience rather than anything else. He had his man floored several times but could not take advantage of his opportunities.

Chludinski is only one of many entered. Other heavyweights who will be in the contention are Mike Romanovitz, Salem; Junius Morgan, Cambridge; James Barry, Dorchester; Lawrence Burke, Dorchester, and several others.

The first of the trials will be conducted a week from Monday and another evening of trials will follow shortly after with the finals next month.

All boxers who have sent in their entries and who have not as yet registered with the New England A. A. U. are urged to do so at once. They should get the necessary blanks from J. Frank Facey, No. 36 Prospect street, Cambridge. Only registered boxers will be permitted to compete.

Tufts Hit Hard by Injuries

Injuries to three players makes the selection of a Tufts starting [illegible] difficult for the Rhode Island game on Saturday at Kingston, R. I.

The announcement that Benny C[illegible], former Lynn all-scholastic [illegible] back and veteran of last [illegible], would not be able to play [illegible] of injuries received early [illegible] week, narrowed the backfield [illegible] to Tony Spath as quarterback.

[illegible] Keith, captain and triple-threat, is destined to bear the brunt of the offense. Keith's record as a punter last season is not to be equalled by any other kicker in New England colleges.

The squad goes through a light w[illegible] this afternoon at the Tufts O[illegible] and boards a bus Saturday morning for Rhode Island.

Players selected last night to make the trip as members of the varsity squad are, Lewis Abdu, Carl Blanchard, Al Baluska, Paul Ierardi, Chet Ingraham, Roger Keith, Paul Philpott, Dave Schectman, Italo Silvestri, Joe Smith, Tony Spath, Jack Sweeney, Jim Weldon, George Baker, Alton Bennett, Jimmie Dodwell, Al Pearson, Linc Redshaw, George Bentley, John Boyd, Fran Desmond, Bill Goodall, Bob MacC[illegible]hon, Jack Kendall, Jack Urban, Jack Byrne, Girand Edwards, Lew Kyrios, Harold Zimman, Ace Acerra, Webster Day and Howard Spragg.

TEXAS Christian Meets TULSA TEAM

San Antonio, Oct. 9 (US)—The forward pass, which has come to be associated with all things football in the Southwest, is on the wing again, and the entire complexion of the Southwest conference race, and this section's standing in the national grid picture has been changed as a result.

Southern Methodist University and Texas Christian University which used the thrown football to achieve high national rating last season have knocked the experts back on their heels with a new assortment of forwards and laterals and are now strictly the teams to beat after being consigned without ado to the cellar when S. M. U. was held to a 6-0 score by Denton Teachers' College, its first out, and T. C. U. was beaten, 7-0, by Texas Tech in an out-of-the-conference toughie.

T. C. U. takes on what would be labelled a breather in Tulsa University this Saturday if the dopesters were in the mood for picking them after last week's jolts. They play at Tulsa.

S. M. U. is in New York for its game Saturday with the hefty Fordham Rams. Again the pickers hunt cover. T[illegible] afraid to say yes and scared to say no. Anyway the M[illegible] will not lack confidence [illegible].

Arkansas ought to win, any way the dope could be figured. With a break or two, the Hogs might have taken T. C. U. as advertised.

Two other games, both likely to be close and both high spots on schedules of the [illegible] the standpoint of [illegible] out the week's program [illegible] last Saturday at A[illegible] 6-6 meet [illegible] of [illegible] on the [illegible] grounds of [illegible] ton, B[illegible] the [illegible] Exposition.

WILSON Choice Goes IN 4TH

ACCOLADE ACE IN FEATURE

By DAVE WILSON

(Selections for Fast Track)

BEST—AMERICAN BELLE, 4TH

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Oct. 9—Don Christmas' Accolade, sterling winner of the Col. A. J. Pierce Speed Handicap, is my choice to win the $2500 added White Mountain Handicap, the mile feature on tomorrow's stellar week-end card.

Accolade must shoulder a crushing impost of 125 pounds including a three-pound penalty. Off his last winning effort, Accolade looms as the best in the White Mountain.

For the safest wagering hazard of the card I am using W. Phelan's American Belle in the fourth race.

FIRST—Phrixus, Douglas F, Pitkin

Shoot for a price here and expect to get same if PHRIXUS escapes early trouble. This pacer drops 13 pounds off a recent credi[illegible] DOUGLAS F nosed out by Lady Thirteen performed as if a trifle [illegible] in that most recent endeavor [illegible] PITKIN [illegible] by Douglas F for place [illegible] in the above mentioned race, also sheds five pounds [illegible]

THIRD—Aunt Flor, Character, Scotch Gold

Stepping along with AUNT FLOR in this wide open race. Recent efforts go for the weaker [illegible] SCOTCH GOLD on class alone shapes formidable in the fight for minor honors.

FOURTH—American Belle, Gay Crest, Zulu Lad

AMERICAN BELLE beat Sand Baby and Bye Bye Ma [illegible] needs only to duplicate that most recent endeavor to lead this less capable field. GAY CREST rated top high in recent races, figures to offer the most contention. ZULU LAD stepped the route in [illegible] from less [illegible] few days back. He figures real well from a [illegible] stand point.

FIFTH—Accolade, Gallant Gay, Beefsteak

ACCOLADE dazzled clockers this morning by whirling three panels in 35 1-5 and [illegible] up the additional furlong in 49 3-5. That move indicates that the Christmas Star is fit as hands can possibly make him. GALLANT GAY [illegible] to Howard [illegible] the Marlow [illegible] Handicap gets into this event beautifully spotted under 113 pounds. This weighted he may prove [illegible] of a contender. BEEFSTEAK figures next best.

SIXTH—Sir Rollie, Motley, Stone Martin

Just can't pass up SIR ROLLIE in this $2[illegible] top and $1500 bottom claimer. Contention may be furnished by MOTLEY. This old fellow holds a touch of [illegible] and can run just as far as they make horse races. Under a feather of 101 pounds he figures [illegible] fall to wire. ORTHOPRISM, a sluggish beginner, will be [illegible] over his opposition at the finish. He shapes up as the [illegible] danger. BUD BROOM did [illegible] badly in finishing third to [illegible] Lad and Hen [illegible] He cannot be totally disregarded.

EIGHTH—Play Book, Stealth, Hot Cake

PLAY BOOK, winner of two straight races, outclasses this field from a speed standpoint. It's just a question of the Nimkoff [illegible] bearer carrying her speed over the marathon route. STEALTH runner-up to Caimant in a nice and a furlong test last trip is clearly the solid form horse of the race. Should take it all if the top one falters. HOT CAKE won going away from less capable opposition only a few days back. He favors the route and must be respected.

Robert Starts Season

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING OF news: Lou Daro, bringing some Los Angeles sunshine, and Joe "Toots" Mondt had dinner with Paul Bowser at the Copley-Plaza. Daro and Mondt made the trip East in an effort to get Bowser to consent to let Steve Casey, Irish heavyweight wrestler, show in California under their direction.

Daro at one time promoted wrestling in Boston back in the days of George V. Tuohey. He later located in Los Angeles, and is the leading wrestling promoter in that section of the country.

Mr. Boston

Mondt was a top flight wrestler 15 years ago, and more recently has been successful as a promoter.

BOWSER will open his wrestling season at the Garden on next Friday night with Yvon Robert defending his title as world's heavyweight mat champion against Ernie Dusek, George Koverly or Gino Garibaldi. Dusek and Garibaldi both wired Boweer they were anxious to take on the champion.

Koverly called attention to the fact he has scored nine straight victories in Boston rings. He pinned Jack Washburn, Nick Lutze, Angelo Cistoldi, Floyd Marshall, George Linnihan, Al Tosti, Charley Strack, Bill Doyle and Arthur LeGrand.

"You refused to give me a bout with O'Mahony when he was champion," Koverly told Bowser. "I hope you now won't refuse me the opportunity to upset Robert."

'Bibber' McCoy

"BIBBER" McCoy of Cambridge, former Holy Cross star, has finally got some local mat recognition. He has been signed to mingle with Wally Dusek, 23-year-old Nebraska heavyweight, at Mechanics Building on next Tuesday night.

McCoy has notified Promoter Eddie Quinn that he will insist upon a local referee. "Bibber" is shooting for a title tussle with Robert, and does not intend to be "jobbed" by a hostile official.

Cleo O'Donnell

I MET Cleo O'Donnell at Rockingham Park. He visited the Salem, N. H., track to greet Tom Thorp, presiding steward and one of the leading football officials in the country.

Cleo, former director of athletics at Holy Cross, holds a similar post at St. Anselm's. He is also coach of the football team at St. Anselm's. His eleven defeated Springfield last Saturday, and will play Ithaca at Manchester, N. H., tomorrow.

Cleo is looking forward to St. Anselm's game with Holy Cross which takes place the Saturday before the Purple clashes with Boston College.

O'Donnell is rooting for Holy Cross to win over Dartmouth at Hanover tomorrow, but will do his utmost to gain a victory for St. Anselm's in their tussle with the Crusaders.

Temple

"POP" Warner will bring a powerful Temple football team here Monday to battle Boston College. Warner is of the opinion his eleven will have sufficient strength to conquer Gil Dobie's outfit.

This game will give Boston College its first real test of the season. Dobie has Boston College ready for the game and is confident his team will win.

Random Shots

LOU Smith tells me that Rockingham can break even on a daily handle of $178,000 . . . The track has done well over $200,000 a day, and will show a profit for its fall meeting . . . Lou says a Californian race track was recently given $600,000 under a PWA project . . . A fair is to be conducted at the track which was the excuse for PWA grant . . . Tom Thorp will return to Narragansett Park as presiding steward at the fall meeting which opens a week from Monday . . . Tom will not be at either Rockingham or Narragansett Park on Saturdays from now on as he is officiating in important football games . . . Rockingham Park may hold steeplechase races next year as part of its program to increase interest in the thoroughbreds . . . I believe steeplechase races would give the public a new thrill, and would also attract a large group of society folks to the track . . . Suffolk Downs on several occasions has talked about staging steeplechase races but has not taken any action on the matter . . . These type of races are popular in Maryland and in New York.

HOW TO TACKLE

HANLEY Explains METHOD

FOUR TYPES IN USE

By L. B. "PAT" HANLEY

Head Coach at Boston University

(Copyright by Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser)

An old football theory is that "A good defense is the best offense."

Most modern coaches, however, although agreeing with it in theory, still strive for offense, taking the attitude that the team which scores the most points wins.

There is no question though that by having a strong defense, the number of points any teams needs to win must be correspondingly less.

Which all comes down to the point, that any club to be successful must have men who can tackle for it is the principal fundamental of defense.

Since it is a defensive maneuver, it should be a natural action, and as a result easy to learn. However, good tackling requires a high degree of muscular coordination, combined with a good sense of timing and judgment of distance. This perfection can only be accomplished by continued practise.

Good tacklers are not content with merely stopping or holding a runner. They are aggressive and decisive, and put the burden on the runner by throwing their weight into the action of dropping the opponent or driving him back.

Poor tackling is usually referred to as "arm-grabbing," because the action is merely an attempt to grasp the runner with the arms or hands, lacking the aggressiveness always found in successful tackling.

The tackler should focus his eyes midway on the opponents' thighs as the spot he intends to strike with his shoulder. He should operate from a somewhat crouched position with the feet sufficiently wide apart to give good balance and to permit a quick change of direction.

The actual tackle should be executed with aggressiveness, a powerful leg drive and follow through, and a secure grasp with the arms and hands. The mid thigh is the best target for normal tackling. Small shifty runners should be tackled around the waist or hips. Possible lateral pass throwers should be tackled around the arms.

Hard Drive

Football players should develop a "gang-tackling" spirit, that is, the urge to have as many players as possible in on each tackle. This can best be developed by teaching each player to drive into the opponent as hard and as quickly as possible, and by rating the successful execution of this fundamental second only to perfect blocking.

Shoulder tackling is the most natural and safest method of bringing down the runner and should be used whenever possible. The essentials of this maneuver are: a low crouched position, sustained and powerful leg action for the drive through the opponents stiff-arm or change of direction and a secure grasp of the runner's legs with the hands and arms.

The shoulder should be driven into the runner's thigh with as much power as possible. The arms encircle the legs and the grasp should be secured by gripping one wrist with the other hand.

Side-Tackling

Side tackling consists of throwing the body across the runner's path and grasping his legs from a front position. The tackler should aim well in front of the runner, attempting to place his chest in front of the opponents thighs. The arms are grasped around the opponent's thighs. The tackler then rolls to the ground on his back to bring the runner down.

Quite frequently a tackler will find himself out of position to execute a clear cut tackle. Instances of this will often be found in close line play, or in line backing, when other players are between the tackler and ball carrier. It finds considerable use by defensive safety men and half backs in forcing opponents out of bounds.

The regulation hip blow is most widely used, since it offers the greater blocking area and less chance of missing. Very little instruction is needed to perfect this type of tackle. Its most difficult feature is in determining when and where it should be used.

Rear tackling is usually associated with a losing cause, but its successful execution has often proved to be the deciding factor in close ball games. The tackler should attempt to grasp the opponent at the waist and to bring his body across the runner's legs. A lower target will usually result in disaster in the form of a missed tackle. The arms should be worked downward toward the runner's knee. Approach from the side makes this tackle much easier and should be tried if possible.

Minnesota-Nebraska Clash Features

Chicago, Oct. 9 (US)—Four of the nation's greatest football teams meet Saturday on Midwest gridirons in games which may indicate at this early date the eventual national champion.

Eighty thousand fans will witness at Columbus the struggle between Ohio State and Pittsburgh. After the veteran Pitt team trampled over Ohio Wesleyan, 53 to 0, two weeks ago and then over West Virginia, 34 to 0, last week, many believed there was no team in sight to stop the onrush of the Panthers.

But they will clash with another powerful team in Ohio State, a team which opened its season Saturday by running up a 60 to 0 score against what was thought to be a fairly good New York University eleven. The Buckeyes sent 52 players, many of them green, into the game and still the score mounted.

Another game in the national spotlight Saturday will be that between the old-time foes, Minnesota, Big Ten champion and undefeated for the last three years, and Nebraska, of the Big Six circuit.

The Gophers, regarded by many as the most powerful team in the United States on past performances, are favorites to win the battle with Nebraska, but it is remembered that they beat the cornhuskers last year by a score of only 12 to 7 and then only after the Gophers had repelled a fourth period assault on their own three-yard line.

While Minnesota and Ohio State are concentrating on their non-conference battles this week-end they should cast a few wary glances at Northwestern, which defeated Iowa and its dusky flash, Oze Simmons, at Evanston last Saturday in impressive fashion.

Two Western Conference games will be played Saturday—Indiana at Michigan and Wisconsin at Purdue. Indiana, one of the big ten "dark horses" along with Northwestern, is rated to whip Michigan.

Wisconsin is vastly improved under the coaching of Harry Stuhldreher, but may not have come along far enough to defeat Purdue.

Michigan, which lost to Michigan State for the third consecutive year Saturday, this year is largely a sophomore team and is not expected to reach its maximum strength till toward the end of the season.

Iowa, defeated by Northwestern, will be host this week-end to South Dakota at Iowa City. The Hawkeyes are expected to win handily.

Notre Dame, victor over Carnegie Tech, 21 to 7, faces what appears to be an easy task in its game with Washington University of St. Louis Saturday. The Irish also hope to down Wisconsin before meeting the tough Pittsburgh squad.

The powerful Marquette team will meet St. Louis University at Soldier Field here in a charity game and should win without difficulty.

B.U. Squad Reaches Toledo

By MURRAY KRAMER

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 9—Boston University's grid squad arrived here this morning for the first time in the Terriers' football history to clash with the University of Toledo tomorrow afternoon.

Outside of a scheduled limbering up drill late this afternoon the squad will take things easy until game time tomorrow. Coach Pat Hanley figuring that his outfit has had plenty of work all week believes that rest today will put the Terriers right on edge for tomorrow.

Toledo fans have gone wild over the Rockets now that the athletic situation is straightened out here with Dr. Spears as the new coach and they are making the locals a 5 to 4 favorite.

If the Terriers flash any of the offensive power they displayed against American International College last Saturday, however, the Rockets will be in for a busy afternoon.

There is only one casualty on the Terriers' squad. Earle Crompton, sophomore triple threat, has a heel bruise. Although painful, it is nothing serious and he will be able to play if needed.

With a backfield of Crompton, Captain Roy Thompson, Gary Famiglietti and Solly Nechtem, Coach Pat Hanley can present a triple threat quartet.

However, if Crompton is unable to play, Leon Spivack will take over the quarterback assignments and be used primarily as a blocker. With Spivack at quarterback, Captain Roy Thompson will choose the plays and call the signals from his halfback post.

Coach Hanley has also decided to keep Rollie Bernard, former all-scholastic center from Rindge Tech, at tackle. And although Rollie will not start tomorrow, he is expected to divide actual playing time with Bob Allen at right tackle.

Johnny Walker, sophomore standout, will be at center, and Charley Dolan, 160 pivot man from Salem, will relieve Johnny if necessary.

The Terriers' schedule for tonight is an early movie, a short blackboard talk, and then to bed at 10:30.

EAGLES SHIFTED

Gintoff Back As Starting Player

In a move aimed at "fielding the strongest team possible but with nothing of a definite nature on the starters yet," Coach Gil Dobie of Boston College, yesterday thoroughly shook up his Eagle eleven as he made final plans for the B. C.-Temple game at Fenway Park on Columbus Day.

Felia Gintoff, sensational sophomore backfield ace, who was out of practice for two weeks with a bad knee, returned last Monday and yesterday was moved up to his regular left halfback berth, pushing Dick Cummings, another sophomore down to the second team.

Gintoff's return, gives the Eagles a brilliant triple threat and a much stronger all around backfield, but his was not the only change in the first team backfield.

Fullback Nick Dergay, a lad who never started a varsity game although he is now a senior and has been on the squad for two full years, was moved up to the fullback post in the Team A backfield and Walter "Cap" Bryan, who started last week against Northeastern, was put in the second backfield.

The first team backfield now has Tony Di Natale, at quarterback, Felia Gintoff at left halfback, Nick Dergay at fullback and Al Tortolini at right halfback. The second backfield lines up with Ira Jivelikian at left halfback; Dick Cummings at quarterback; Walter Bryan at right half and Al Horsfal at fullback.

Dimitri Zaitz, 220-pound left guard, has been dropped to the third team. This demotion moved up Paul Sweeney, 190-pound senior, but Sweeney was shaken up in yesterday's scrimmage and Oscoe Gilman, starting left tackle in the N. U. game, has been shifted to left guard. Gilman weighs 205 and has been regular tackle for two years.

Captain Alec Pszenny, regular right guard, received a rib bruise in the opening game and has been resting since then although Dr. Ben Godvin, team physician, says he will surely be able to play against The Owls. As Joe Keaney, Pszenny's substitute is definitely out of the Temple battle with an infected foot, Frank Ryan, 185 pound junior, has been playing on the first team all week and will understudy Captain Alec on Monday.

Shifts have been made at both the ends also as sophomore Jim Flynn, 178 pound wingman from Boston English, has displaced Dan McFadden at left end and Johnny Morris carries on at right end, while Jim Cahill rests up after a busy afternoon against Northeastern. Cahill is expected to be ready to start Monday but Flynn's advancement over McFadden is a surprise.

Yesterday Coach Dobie ran his squad through a stiff scrimmage against Temple plays and also polished up his own defense.

Atilio Ferdenzi, brilliant Ashland speed merchant, is definitely out of the holiday tilt with a sprained ankle as is Keaney, but these are the only two sure absentees at present.

Ralph Worth continues to hold onto the varsity center berth ahead of the veteran Vin Keough and John Janusas has yet to be dislodged from his right tackle berth.

The first two teams as Coach Dobie lined them up yesterday were as follows: Team A—James Flynn, le; Andy Dominick, lt; Oscoe Gilman, lg; Ralph Worth, c; Frank Ryan, rg; John Janusas, rt; John Morris, re; Tony DiNatale, qb; Felia Gintoff, lhb; Al Tortolini, rhb; Nick Dergay, fb.

Radio News and Notes:

Top Radio Tune Troupes on Air

By N. F. T.

It's been a long time since, indeed, perhaps never was there a time when so much to be thankful for in the way of orchestral offerings on the air for music lovers existed in these thickets.

All the Hub stations are hustling to keep microphones in front of all the swell dance bands doings that now hold forth in old Boston.

Last night, for example (WEEI), marked the advent hereabouts of a tall, dark and handsome band boss named Nye Mayhew.

"N. F. T."

Listeners must have liked it a heap when his men made the current melody hits sound as they did to the dancers at the auspicious Statler opening. Mayhew, the maestro, certainly knows his sharps, flats and how to arrange them, no mistake. Refreshing, too, is the vibrant voice of the gal singer with his outfit, a very lovely lass to look at named Evelyn Oakes, who should cause the radio rajahs to speed up television.

RHYTHM IS RAMPANT

And surely you're hearing the hotcha provided by Lew Conrad and his tune troupe (WAAB) taking the air from the Cocoanut Grove these nights. Also the snappy swing sessions staged by George Harris. George is going grand and making the Mayfair patrons all the merrier (WBZ) while the dials are pulling in his rhythm behind living room walls galore. Music is riding the waves for fair and Boston doesn't have to have it fed through network channels from New York. There's all we want right here in our own broadcasting backyard.

"Hollywood Hotel," one of the first big programs to come from the film capital, will begin its third year on the air (WEEI) this evening from 9 to 10 p. m. There's to be a gala celebration featuring Errol Flynn and Olivia De Haviland in preview scenes from "The Charge of the Light Brigade," and the regular "Hollywood Hotel" headliners—Dick Powell, Frances Langford, Igor Gorin and Raymond Paige's orchestra.

Powell will be "cut in" on the full-hour program from New York, where he is honeymooning with Joan Blondell.

CONCERT COLOR

An original march by Bourdon will open tonight's weekly concert (WNAC) featuring Jessica Dragonette, soprano, the Revelers and Rosario Bourdon's Orchestra, meaning at 8:00 p. m. Miss Dragonette will sing Rubinstein's "Since I First Met Thee," Delibes' "Les Filles de Cadiz" and Brahmns' "Lullaby."

* * *

A blow-by-blow description of the Joe Louis-George Brescia fight from the Hippodrome will be broadcast by Sam Taub, ace Mutual Broadcasting System fights announcer, (WAAB) this evening from 9:45 to 10:45 p. m.

The question of how good a showing the burly Argentine heavyweight will make against the rejuvenated Brown Bomber promises to the radio fight fans a fight worth listening to.

REALTORS WARNED

Marketing Problem Told

Springfield, Oct. 9—With increasing activity in the sale and rental of real estate everywhere, realtors must keep their services beyond market requirements, or the increased volume will get beyond their facilities to take care of it.

This was the warning given by Vincent P. Bradley, Trenton, N. J., for years head of the state real estate license commission of New Jersey, in an address before general sessions of the first regional convention of realtors here today.

Present at the conference were more than 100 members of the Boston Real Estate Exchange, which body is the local constituent board of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"More real estate is in the hands of a greater number of owners than at any time during the past century," Mr. Bradley pointed out.

"Skilled management of real property and accurate appraisal are the branches of realtor services at present most in the public eye. But the marketing work of realtors will now come rapidly to the forefront. Owners want to be shown how they should market their holdings to the best possible advantage, and it is the task of the realtors to show how this can be done."

Gross rental as an index of the value of the property played an important part in the six million appraisals made in passing upon applications from Home Owners Loan Corporation loans, Colbert E. Reeves, M. A. I., Washington, D. C., and Buffalo, N. Y., appraisal consultant of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, told the convention.

William H. Ballard, of Boston, vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers for New England Region presided at the general sessions. He was assisted by Stephen W. Sleeper of Boston and Maurice F. Heidy of Worcester.

The convention will come to a close tonight with a banquet at the Hotel Kimball. Walter W. Rose, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be the principal speaker.

His address is entitled "What can we do to help the real estate market?" Vice-President William H. Ballard of Boston will read a summary of the convention, to be followed by presentation of contest awards.

Try 'Truth Serum' In Maine Shooting

Portland, Me., Oct. 9—A "truth serum" test did not change Bernard A. Morrill's story of the fatal shooting of his 19-year-old wife, Barbara, at their North Windham home September 29, officials said today.

Morrill, they asserted, submitted voluntarily to an injection of scopolamaine at a hospital here, and was questioned three hours concerning the shotgun death.

Daily Tax Fact

By B. C. FORBES

Leroy A. Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Life, the world's largest life insurance company, sagely observes:

"Since government is not organized to engage in production, in the ordinary sense, each addition to a government payroll not only takes out of the production of goods and out of private service, every person employed by the government, but also places upon the remaining producers and workers the responsibility of supporting a greater number of non producers."

In 1903 our various governments—federal, state and local—took from our pockets only 7 per cent of our national income. This year they are taking 28.8 per cent.

In 1890 our governments spent $855,000,000. This year the staggering total is $17,300,000,000. Thus:

Fiscal year	Govt. Expenditures	% Expenditures to National Income
1890	$ 855,000,000	7.1
1903	1,570,000,000	7.1
1913	2,919,000,000	7.8
1918	23,000,000,000X	33.0X
1925	11,126,000,000	13.1

"Why Don't Folk Like Me?"

Countess Barbara Pines for U. S.

New York, Oct. 9 (US)—Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow wants to come back home and raise her baby son as an American.

The Woolworth heiress, like the Lindberghs, fled to England to escape the spotlight of publicity.

She feels that Americans dislike her.

And she never loved her first husband, the late Prince Alexis Mdivani.

These and other startling sidelights on the character of the "five and ten cent heiress" she revealed to Adela Rogers St. John in the first interview granted since the birth of her son, appearing in the November issue of Cosmopolitan.

Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow is obsessed by one idea—

"Why do people dislike me?"

The once carefree Babs Hutton has grown up, Mrs. St. John says, and quotes her thus:

"I left America because they said and wrote such unkind things about me. I couldn't stand people disliking me so much and always thinking the worst of me, so I came away.

"That is why I am living in England, where they don't pay any attention to me.

No Illusions

"I'm not under any illusions about myself. I don't give a hoot for social position. We haven't any, really—how could we have? If we didn't have all this money we couldn't be in the social register.

"I have no more to do with running the Woolworth stores than I have with running the British empire.

"I have never had anything to do about all this money. After all, I am only one generation removed from the women of my family who washed their own dishes and made their own clothes.

"I have a hunch that if I had to go back to the dishpan, I could do it.

"My son isn't so far away from my grandfather, who started in a small town store, that he can't understand and go back to it.

"If I can, I shall bring my son up so it won't make any difference whether he has money or not. My son will do something.

"I don't know what it will be, but something. He'll be trained as his father was trained, as my father and grandfather were trained. He won't be just a rich woman's spoiled kid."

Deport Alien Reds! Rescind The Recognition of Soviet Russia

THE fact that Communism—nurtured by Soviet Russia—is seeking to destroy the free institutions of America is not to be denied.

Neither is the shameful fact to be denied that COMMUNISTS are supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt for re-election in 1936 IN ORDER TO BUILD A REVOLUTIONARY "PEOPLES FRONT" IN 1940.

Mr. Roosevelt has said that he repudiates this support.

But what has he done to prove that he repudiates it?

Russian Communism in America can be officially repudiated only by two courses of executive action:

1—By immediately deporting all alien Communists, as the law requires; and

2—By immediately rescinding the recognition of Soviet Russia.

"Farewell to Harvard?"

HARVARD UNIVERSITY, recently celebrating her 300th birthday, celebrated also the victory of academic freedom over legislative oppression, proudly proclaimed that victory to the four corners of the earth.

It was a distinguished congregation that hailed the Tercentenary—foremost scholars of the world; government officials and outstanding alumni, President Roosevelt among them.

"A bright blossom in the garden of democracy," one gifted orator called the event. The world, generally, applauded.

But there was one who did not applaud. This was William Morris Houghton, too busy then writing a brilliant article for the American Mercury to waste time on hand-clapping, which he rather sadly titled, "Farewell to Harvard."

Skeptically, Houghton wrote:

"Our greetings to Harvard on her great birthday may be in the nature of hail and FAREWELL."

And, recalling that it was not until after the Civil War that Harvard completely shook off the domination of the Massachusetts General Court and that of overzealous church authorities, he added:

"Harvard has to face now, not the government and church of Massachusetts, from whose clutches she managed to extricate herself after two centuries and a half of struggle . . . but a FAR MIGHTIER and MORE CUNNING opponent and one armored in innocence.

"The New Deal has no conscious designs on Harvard or academic freedom. Is it not captained by a Harvard product, guided by Harvard minds?

"But suppose, for example, the New Deal's policy of taxation is carried to its logical extreme, how long could a university which depends for its growth on the growth of its endowment, and, therefore, on the gifts and bequests of the wealthy, continue to grow?

"How long, with the ever-increasing demands upon it, could it remain self-supporting?

"How soon before it must accept assistance proffered from Washington ON WHATEVER CONDITIONS THE GENTLEMEN IN AUTHORITY SEE FIT TO IMPOSE?"

MR. HOUGHTON'S warning that politics might again rule Harvard's academic policy was the one sour note in the otherwise harmonious observance.

In the triumphant song of the Tercentenary it was, perhaps, lost. No one mentioned it, or cared to give it consideration.

But, apparently, the sour note does not intend to remain lost. Ironically, it arises from the grave.

And Harvard reads it again in the codicil of the will of a distinguished son, Jesse I. Straus, donor of $300,000 to the University in 1923.

The codicil, cancelling a bequest to Harvard of $165,000 and $335,000 to the Jewish Federation, was a result of THE CONFISCATORY TAXES OF THE NEW DEAL.

Harvard gets nothing, even though Mr. Straus was a member of her Board of Overseers and of various other important committees. Retention of the $165,000 bequest would have forced his estate into hasty liquidation, Mr. Straus feared; resulting in losses from untimely sale of assets, and, probably, menacing the inheritances of Mrs. Straus and her children.

"FAREWELL to Harvard?" Mr. Houghton's fanciful article found reality in the reluctant action of one Harvard official.

The money that might have enriched the University, extended her knowledge, provided tuition for those that need tuition, does not come. A new form of legislative oppression—an oppression new to Harvard's turbulent history—keeps it away.

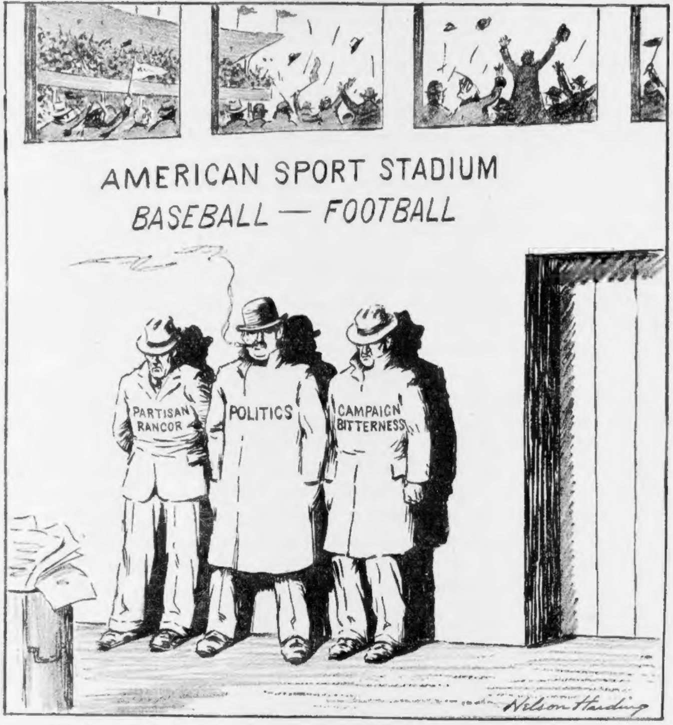
Will other successful sons of Harvard follow Jesse Straus' lead, take his reluctant action and cancel by codicils their bequests?

Will Harvard, no longer self-supporting, some day bow her proud head under the yoke of Washington as payment for financial assistance?

These questions thoughtful Harvard men ask, though November 3rd may give them the answer.

No Admittance

By Nelson Harding



There is no room for that trio
In the stadium or ball park
Where the nation's games and pastimes
Bring good natured crowds together.

Left outside and quite forgotten
By a clean sport loving people
Are class consciousness and rancor
And political dissension.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 9—Thoughts while strolling: For a revue title: Stuff and Things. Handles knocked that double talk for a loop. Most frequent error of the radio announcers — pronouncing laboratory. They will call Tommy Manville a playboy despite his white hair and stoop.

Heartiest laugh ever heard in the theater: Bob Benchley roasting at W. C. Fields. Who remembers when Katharine was spelled Katherine? For first choice between Lanny Ross and Dick Powell, my vote would go to Powell. The Frank V. Storrs have the spiffiest dressed chauffeurs in town.

Girl cigarette smokers somehow never look youthful and corn fed. Not many have Herbert Marshall's naturalness on the screen. Or his superb diction. Those ruddy Irish boys scrubbed to such a shine after the day's work. And skylarking on the 10th avenue corners.

Look alikes: Fred Astaire and Freeman Gosden, the Amos of Amos 'n' Andy. And Charles Winninger would make a dandy model for John Bull. Memory: Jimmy Walker's green limousine parked smack in front of a water plug at the Ritz. Hugh O'Connell, for my money, to play a reporter on the stage.

Radio censorship should include those nauseating bad breath and b. o. announcements around dinner time at least. Not many actors so genuinely mourned as Tommy Meighan. Buff Cobb's contagious laugh. A prayer: To reach the age of Alison Skipworth and have her vigor and zest for living.

James Thornton is vaudeville's most stubborn die-hard. As he says, "a bottle-scarred veteran." Edging the 80's the monologist and song writer is still up and at 'em.

Beginning in a Boston museum, he saw vaudeville reach its pinnacle, go down the hill and is still bewildered that there is not a straight vaudeville house left in America.

He has been doing his "The Volstead Act" for 17 years and is trouping again with it this fall. His health is excellent.

Attendance at the Empire building tower proves again the low ebb of New York's civic pride. Since the observatory opened in May, 1931, there have been 2,116,384 paid admissions. Less than 10 per cent were New Yorkers. And most New Yorkers are brought there, in a bored manner, by out of town friends on a visit.

A statistician recently found 100 persons within a three-block radius of the tower who had never scaled the heights. Denver, per population, has furnished the greatest number of visitors, I was told.

The Pike's Peak influence!

Literary aspirants, biting pencil ends over progress, may find inspiration for a chirk of hope by the early struggles of Booth Tarkington, generally considered America's No. 1 novelist and short story spinner. In his first five years of fictioning, Tarkington's income from this source was $22.50.

Fanny Hurst's first year winnowed exactly $12. Sinclair Lewis in formative years did not average more than $300 annually and Theodore Dreiser had long stretches where he did not salvage his return postage coverage.

Even the gifted Edith Wharton had a low year of $19. No calling requires so much persistence and none has such pleasant awards for perseverance.

Hollywood continues to beat Paris and New York to the style punch. Not only in the dress designs by Adrian, Orry Kelly and other of the boys, but in dress accessories for both men and women. The high boot craze was going a month in Hollywood before reaching here.

And the thunder-pattern shirts were dazzling the Beverly canyons some weeks before they reached the avenue.

There are even rumors Paris has copyists planted in Hollywood.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

So many of us sitting around these days waiting for the "right job" to turn up . . . envying the lucky devils who have them.

"No wonder they're successful and happy" — you sneer to yourself. "They've found a job that fits 'em. I could succeed, too, if I could find a job like that. People think I'm lazy but I'm not. Trying to duck work—but I'm not. People think I ought to take any job that comes along, whether I'm fitted for it or not. But I can't do that. There's no use taking a job unless it's the right job. What's the use doing something you hate when you know you're bound to fail?

"Everything would be different if I could find the right job. If I were lucky like some people . . . if I had a pull, I'd show them—"

So many of us sitting around, looking at our demoralized world, saying these things to ourselves. So many of us growing old and older, waiting for the "right job" or the "right chance" or the "right person" to come along. Thinking that if we wait long enough, wish hard enough, they surely will.

But they won't. For there are no "right" jobs or chances or people. There are only the schnt makings. The rest is up to us.

The fact that people seem happy and contented with their jobs or their homes does not prove that they have found the "right" position or the "perfect mate." It simply proves that they have had, enough spunk and shrewdness to take what is offered and build upon it.

THE TRUE PICTURE

They didn't find a chance which "just fitted" them. They fitted themselves to the chance which they found. Consider, for example, this newspaper world which seems so glamorous, so thrilling, to those looking in. Rare indeed is the individual who has as much power as a successful columnist—who looms so large in the public eye. And you think, enviously, of the talent and opportunity which must lie behind such success.

This particular writer started her columnist career on $12 per week, upon which she supported herself and an invalid son. After working three years for 14 hours a day, she achieved the princely recompense of $20 per week—and went out cold. Yet, in comparison with most of the gang, she was wallowing in wealth!

DARE TO FACE FACTS

She took what she could get. And here we are. With you still thinking I'm doing the job I dote on . . . and I still wishing I were!

Stop kidding yourself, stranger, and wasting your life—there are no "just right" jobs. But there are the makings of adventure and pride and sufficient happiness in ANY job, if you have sense enough to look for them, spunk enough to utilize them.

And any job's the right kind of a job if you're the right kind of man.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

A few days ago, a man went into a Washington, D. C., bank, wrote out a check for 22 million dollars, signed the name of J. P. Morgan and presented it for payment. When payment was denied, he wrote out another check. This one was for 160 millions and the name of John D. Rockefeller was signed to it. After his second check was rejected, the man amused himself by writing other checks for astronomical sums until police took him away to a hospital for observation as to his mental condition. This check-writing incident is an epitome of the New Deal.

From the very beginning of the Roosevelt administration, the New Dealers have been writing checks on other people's bank accounts. And what's more, they have been cashing them. The New Dealers didn't stop at writing checks for a few millions. They drew checks for billions. And they didn't just sign the names of multimillionaires. They signed the names of all the people, the poor as well as the rich.

The principal difference between the Washington check writer and the New Deal Administration is that the New Dealers got the money on the checks they wrote. They have a Treasury Department which can make the banks take their checks. And thus far they have checked out some 13 BILLIONS of other people's money. While there is no danger of the New Dealers being sent to jail or to an insane asylum for their check writing proclivities, they are under strict public observation right now while the voters are deciding how they are going to mark their ballots in the November election.

A large sum of money has been invested by the New Deal Administration in a resettlement experiment in Alaska. Several hundred people have been shipped up there and have been located on lands picked out for them by the government. And at the same time this same Federal government is trying to drive 4000 homesteaders off lands upon which they have filed in the public lands States of the West!

In his Pittsburgh speech, President Roosevelt continued to spread the New Deal fiction that the 8 billion dollar "net" debt he admits his administration has incurred isn't going to cost anybody anything. Speaking of "this foolish fear about the crushing load the (national) DEBT WILL IMPOSE UPON YOUR CHILDREN AND MINE," he said:

"This debt is not going to be paid by oppressive taxation on future generations. It is not going to be paid by taking away the hard won savings of the present generation. IT IS GOING TO BE PAID OUT OF AN INCREASED NATIONAL INCOME AND INCREASED INDIVIDUAL INCOME produced by increasing national prosperity."

That sounds very reassuring. But what is that "national income"? Nothing but the earnings of the American people.

It is pertinent to ask HOW IS THE NATIONAL DEBT TO BE PAID OUT OF INCREASED NATIONAL INCOME. There can be only one answer—"through TAXATION."

Social Security Facts

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

In a campaign year, more than any other time, there is a lot of talk about big ideas. Much of the talking is done by persons who know the least about the matters discussed, and those who really know something don't seem to have much of a say. This department has been especially interested in social security, for surely that's right smack on the target of "The Human Side of the News."

There's nothing more important than every man's hope for an untroubled future, and no more important news than the story of his chance to get it—if any. The air is full of social security talk by politicians, professors, nominees and other folk—the views of everybody, in fact, except those whose trade is social security.

It made me look up a man who had been impelled by enlightened self-interest really to study the problem. And he brings to it the light and detachment of an expert rather than the obfuscation of a doctrinaire.

As you might guess, he is an insurance man, and a very intelligent specimen. From Boston, en route to his home in Chicago, came Alfred J. Johannsen, newly elected president of the Chartered Life Underwriters of America.

EXPERT INFORMATION

He has handled insurance running into imposing figures and is in the top brackets of this competition. And he is also one of the younger innovators and pioneers in further sound, exact and searching economic studies as a new underpinning for the vast life insurance structure of America. I said to Mr. Johannsen:

"Both sides in this campaign are offering 'social security.' The phrase is new and attractive in politics. As an insurance expert, you ought to have some exact knowledge of the subject if anybody has. Can any government make good on a promise like that?"

Said Mr. Johannsen:

"If anybody gives you any pat answers to a question like that, they are fooling you. I don't want to get into any discussion of opposed political theories on social security, but I don't mind telling you about the modern approach to the subject.

"Young insurance men are being put through a course in economics and finance which, more and more, requires of them professional qualifications—and I really mean professional—comparable to those of doctors, lawyers or engineers.

"Selling insurance is one thing; getting accumulated insurance funds working for the good of all concerned is something else again. Your annuity, coming up in say 10 years, may look good to you today. It is probable, but not inevitable that, when you get it, it will buy you the security you thought it would. It is just remotely possible that with a decade of social disorder and political bungling it will be dissipated by inflation.

ADEQUATE SECURITY

"Insurance companies, even before the current period of intensive research, have been able to beat that. They have an amazing record of solvency and continuity through periods of the worst stress and danger of the modern world. Even the German insurance companies survived that ruinous slump into inflation.

"Bentham, Cobden or Mill might have been a bit confused with all our complexities of a highly developed exchange economy. We need more light and we are trying to get it. Progressive insurance management today is not only a seminar, but a laboratory of social security. It is objective and scientific."

When Mr. Johannsen told me about the swarms of young men who are being coached in this endeavor, it was an eye opener. I submit that perhaps, in all our view of public problems, we should not be too much discouraged by the resounding clamor into which great public issues seem to resolve themselves. There is a lot of sound work being carried on off-stage.

New Dealer Dissents

By Edward R. Burke

U. S. Senator from Nebraska, Member of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary and Lately Resigned as Democratic National Committeeman from Nebraska.
At a Meeting of the South Dakota Bar Association

Through one hundred and fifty years of marvellous growth in America—growth in area, in population and in wealth—the Constitution has furnished a stability and security of inestimable value.

It has at times appeared to some, today more than at any time in the past, that America could move more rapidly toward what these consider the desired goal, were it not for the limitations which the people imposed upon their own governmental agencies, both State and national, through the medium of written constitutions.

Far outweighing that delay in action has been the assurance flowing from the certainty of constitutional guarantees that there are individual and property rights upon which no government dare trespass.

It is this sense of guaranteed security that has made possible the unloosing of creative energy and individual initiative without which this record of achievement could never have been accomplished.

In summary, then, we understand that the Constitution establishes a central government of limited powers.

All powers not granted to the Congress or to the Executive, either expressly or by necessary implication, are reserved to the States and to the people.

While the Constitution stands, neither the Congress nor the President can lawfully exercise any powers not so granted.

If changed conditions have now made it necessary and proper that some of the powers reserved to the States, or not heretofore granted to any Government, should at this time be lodged in Washington, the people, if they so desire, by the orderly process of amendment, may make a new grant of power.

Under a written constitution which establishes a government of limited powers it is essential that there be an independent judiciary clothed with authority to strike down legislative enactments or executive orders which are found to be in conflict with the fundamental law as written in the Constitution.

When a case arises which involves the question whether a statute is in conflict with a provision of the Constitution, the Court must, as it has often declared, lay the challenged statute by the side of the invoked constitutional provision, and, if there is a conflict, the inferior statute must give way before the superior Constitution.

If the highest court is divided and a minority is not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that there is a conflict, it is not in accordance with the American spirit to insist that the Court has rendered two decisions.

The action of the majority is the action of the Court, and that alone, whatever merit there may be in the dissenting opinions.

More than anything else in this country today we need a renewed emphasis upon the fundamental and unchangeable guarantees of the Constitution.

We need to continually remind ourselves, as well as others, that the American system is one of limited governmental powers.

Our fathers feared the tyranny of unchecked sovereigns.

NO LESS DID THEY DREAD, AND DETERMINE TO GUARD AGAINST, THE LUST FOR POWER OF UNRESTRICTED LEGISLATURES.

They knew that authority continually reaches out for more authority and is never sated, that power feeds upon power until nothing else will satisfy its constant craving.

They wanted government so restricted that all could realize that there are many things that affect the lives of the citizens that no government can properly do OR OUGHT EVER TO BE PERMITTED TO TRY TO DO.

Only thus, they believed, would the sacred rights of the people be safe from encroachment.

Thus only would it be possible, they clearly saw, to develop that spirit of self-reliance, that willingness to depend upon individual initiative, which would make of each American citizen a sovereign in his own right.

Under that system America has prospered.

Dark days came, and in a depression which should have long since been dispelled, troubled citizens began to grope after new gods.

WE NOW TURN AGAIN TO THE FUNDAMENTALS.

The Constitution lives.

Let America preserve and honor it, let its spirit rule our thinking and our lives, and America may look forward to still better days to come.
